Four-Nation Diplomatic Journey

President Leaves for Europe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford left today on his first trip to Europe since becoming chief executive with a reaffirmation of support for the North Atlantic alliance and a pledge to work with America's allies "to safeguard our vital interests."

In a brief ceremony at Andrews Air Force Base, Md. before leaving on his six-day, four-nation trip, Ford pledged the United States' cooperation in reducing the chances of conflict and promoting the well-being of all peoples.

"This trip to Europe has great significance for all Americans," Ford said. "We live in an inter-related world in which domestic problems — including the issues of energy and the economy — are linked to our relations with other nations."

Ford's first stop on his 11,000-mile trip was a summit meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in Brussels. He also travels to Spain, Austria and Italy to meet with those countries' leaders.

One of the most important meetings during the trip will be with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat in Salzburg, Austria early next week. The meeting — described by Ford as having the goal of "achieving a just peace in the Middle East" — is expected to play a key role in the President's announced reassessment of U.S. policy in that area.

Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller saw Ford and his wife Betty off on their trip.

The President's daughter, Susan, hugged her parents before they entered Air Force One for takeoff. Miss Ford, who has been studying photography, had several cameras slung over her shoulder and took pictures of the departure.

Saying that the "United States seeks international cooperation — not confrontation," Ford used his brief departure remarks to stress the United States' role in NATO, saying:

"I want to reaffirm at this time — and will do so again in Brussels — the United States' commitment to the North Atlantic Treaty, which is vital to American security and well-being."

"Jobs for all Americans who want to work, the availability of essential resources and the value of our dollars depend upon creative diplomacy and world peace."

"There is much work to be done on this trip," the President said. "I will represent a confident and united America — an America determined, with its allies, to safeguard our vital interests. The United States is equally determined to reduce the chances of conflict, to increase cooperation and to enhance the well-being of Americans and all peoples. I am confident that each stop and each meeting will contribute to these objectives."

Last November, when he went to Vladivostok for a summit meeting with Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, Ford had said: "I would rather travel thousands of miles for peace than take a single step towards war." Departing for NATO, Ford said: "And I add today that I will never fail to take a single step that might prevent a future war."

In Brussels, Ford also will meet privately with allied heads of state, including French President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing. He will discuss the Cyprus issue with leaders of Greece and Turkey, and will talk with Portuguese Prime Minister Vasco Dos Santos Goncalves, whose government has taken on Communist overtones which concern Ford and other allied leaders.

The President will leave Brussels Saturday morning for an overnight stay in Madrid, where he will be welcomed by Generalissimo Francisco Franco.

Ford will then fly to Salzburg, Austria, to confer with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, a meeting Ford said would have one goal — "that of achieving a just peace in the Middle East."

En route back to Washington Tuesday, Ford will stop off in Rome for several hours to confer and have lunch with Italian leaders and have an audience with Pope Paul VI.

Ford Rips 'Do Nothing Congress', Then Raises Foreign Oil Tariff

WASHINGTON (UPI) — "Congress did nothing."

Again and again, ripping pages from a calendar of congressional inaction, President Ford repeated that litany Tuesday night.

He told the American people "Congress has acted only negatively" on his energy proposals, that the United States could have an energy shortage overnight, that he had no choice but to act himself where the nation's lawmakers had failed.

In a 14-minute national telecast, Ford said he will add another dollar a barrel to the import fee on foreign crude oil as of June 1. He also said he would ask Congress for a gradual end to price controls on domestic oil along with a windfall profits tax on oil companies.

The President also set a 60-cent levy, the first ever, for imported refined petroleum products such as heating oil and gasoline.

Ford said he was raising the tariff on foreign oil now — boosting the price of gasoline prices by 1.5 cents a gallon by August — because Congress had not acted on either his legislative program or one of its own during the 90 days he delayed imposing the higher import fee.

"The Congress cannot drift, dawdle and debate forever with America's future," Ford said. The closing line of his text said: "I will not stand here idly while the United States of America runs out of gas."

The June 1 tariff increase is in addition to the first $1 per barrel levy Ford imposed Feb. 1.

Although the tariff increase is primarily designed to increase foreign oil prices by $1 a barrel, thus reducing imports, Federal Energy Administration officials said it would cause a similar rise in the price of "new" domestic oil — oil produced in excess of 1972 levels — which sells at the foreign price now about $11.50 a barrel.

The President proposed to decontrol the price of "old" domestic oil — that produced within 1973 levels and accounting for about 40 percent of all U.S. production. This is expected to increase gasoline prices by another nickel within two years.

The current energy shortage, Ford said, will cost the country $25 billion in payments to foreign producers this year if his programs aren't enacted and would cost American workers their jobs.

"When I talk about energy, I am talking about jobs," he said. "Our American economy runs on energy. No energy, no jobs. In the long run it's just that simple."

But congressional critics said it was not that simple.

"You're not going to add any jobs by raising the price of oil to all Americans," said Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, claiming Ford's proposal amounted to a "hidden tax" on fuel.

"We developed a responsible energy program, only we didn't look for easy answers. We looked for real answers and the real answers are all hard ones," he said.

Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill., said, "The President is correct in criticizing Congress' failure to act but his solution is the wrong one. It is inflationary and harmful to the average American."

Rep. Margaret Heckler, R-Mass., complained that the tariff on refined fuel "falls heavily and unfairly on Massachusetts and New England where we have taken strong measures to conserve fuel. This increase in the imported oil tariff will only hurt more businesses and individuals."

But Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania defended Ford. "Whatever has been done about saving energy has come from the President," he said. "I urge the Congress to act cooperatively and expeditiously on his proposals. So far the Congress hasn't saved enough energy to light a five watt bulb."

Long Range Planning Urged by C-H President

NEWBURGH H. Clifton Wilson, president of Central Hudson Gas and Electric Corp., called for long range planning for national energy policy in a recent speech before the National Security Seminar held on the campus of Mount Saint Mary College in Newburgh.

"Urge your elected representatives to think about the long term rather than proceeding with an ad hoc response to each and every crisis, responses that are too little, too much, and always too late," he urged his audience.

"Speak out on legislation that seems to respond to a situation but is amended into short-term benefits or long-term harm, depending upon whose ox is being gored," Wilson said.

Wilson said he was placing special emphasis on the long term "because in the industry I represent we spend a large part of our working hours on future planning."

Wilson attributed present energy difficulties to the Middle East war of October, 1973, which precipitated the oil embargo, he said.

The embargo, combined with Arab military successes, gave the Arabs a whole new sense of their own power and capacity," he noted. "United in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), they set out to redress the imbalance between cheap oil and costly imports and also, in a psychological sense, to redress centuries of colonialism and exploitation."

The energy crisis had three dimensions, the oil embargo, the shortage of supply, and the "quantum" increase in oil prices, Wilson said.

"The embargo was directed largely at the United States," Wilson said. "While its economic impact, in the beginning, may have been selective, its political dimension could be of more general concern."

The shortage of supply and increase in price should be related if the normal laws of supply and demand were allowed to operate, but political considerations at home as well as abroad have prevented the marketplace from operating."

Wilson said the most immediate and critical problem concerns price. "Current price levels are simply not sustainable without a wrenching readjustment in the basic economy of the entire world," he maintained. "At these levels, the industrial countries alone will incur a deficit of $36-$40 billion. Such large increases in costs have seriously magnified both unemployment and inflation in the importing countries, while the effect on price-controlled domestic production has been devastating."

Court Action to Obtain Funds Option For Community Action

By Hugh Reynolds

KINGSTON

Rebuffed by the city, ignored by the federal government, the Ulster County Community Action Committee held out the possibility Tuesday night that it would go to court in order to change the city's $1.4 million Community Development program for 1975.

Holding its second public information meeting—the first was held on April 2 at the Holiday Inn where about 80 persons showed up—Community Action offered what has been a familiar presentation over the past seven weeks: a review of the city's plans and criticism of its priorities coupled with its own proposals which lean heavily toward rehabilitation and housing. Only about 30 persons were on hand at the Unitarian Fellowship of Ulster County Church on 99 Henry Street last night.

The question of where Community Action goes after having all its proposals rejected by the city and after the federal government approved the city plan in toto without a single criticism or question, was raised by Paul Atkinson.

"It seems obvious that we're in a confrontation situation with city hall," Atkinson opined. "They've made their intentions clear. What are CAP's? (Community Action Program). Mayor Koenig is not going to voluntarily cooperate with us," Atkinson said.

John Kelly, an attorney assigned to the Community Action Task Force, taking Atkinson's lead, said, "The decision on whether to take legal action should probably be made by the citizens and CAP. There has to be dialogue input from the community. There is a need for a great deal more discussion before any such step is taken."

Kelly indicated that if there were legal action it would probably be against the federal government rather than the city. "The possibility of legal action against HUD for violating its own rules is being considered," Kelly said.

David Joseph, executive director of Community Action, supported Kelly. "Community Action is definitely prepared to take such action," Joseph said but added it would be "much more preferable to settle our differences on a local basis."

Joseph said that Community Action's concern with HUD visa vis Community Development was "greater than Kingston."

"If we take legal action it will be of national scope," he said. Terry Berger, the planner with the task force, spoke for close to an hour, using charts, maps and graphs that showed the city will spend $575,000 for recreation of its $1,359,000 first year grant. "The real question is how did the city determine it (recreation) was the priority problem of low and middle income people," she said. A total of $375,000 will be spent on the municipal auditorium. Her recommendations dealt with "community preservation."

Meanwhile, the Community Development Advisory Council was meeting at city hall and again affirmed its support of expenditures for the Municipal Auditorium.

"I think the unanimity over the auditorium was the best thing that came out of this meeting tonight," Chairman Clifford G. Sinsabaugh told the Freeman.

Ted Weiner indicated, however, that the Community Development Advisory Council was going to be a good deal more than "just advisory" as the program unfolds. "Our group is going to bird-dog that auditorium. We're going to make sure there are programs for the youth."

"Our group is going to bird-dog the whole thing," said the Rev. John Gilmore who was elected vice chairman last night. "We're going to watch every penny."

'Dare to Be Great' . . . Turner Ordered to Pay Back $44 Million

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Florida promoter Glenn Turner has been ordered to pay back $44 million to consumers allegedly defrauded by his cosmetics selling operation.

The ruling came from an administrative law judge at the Federal Trade Commission, who said perhaps 30,000 investors in the Koscot cosmetics business run by Turner wound up in a "virtual financial nightmare."

Turner appeared briefly in Ulster County in 1972 to address several thousand of his sales personnel at a regional meeting at the Granit Hotel in Accord.

The operation was an endless pyramid scheme, said Judge Donald Moore, which relied on recruiting other investors at prices up to $5,000. "The fallacy in the 'endless chain' aspect of the Koscot marketing program, with each distributor supposedly recruiting successively two other distributors a month, is that it involves a geometric progression which, carried to its ultimate result, would mean that in 18 months the entire U.S. population (203 million in 1970) would be involved in the plan...." Moore said. The result, he said, was that the first few people who got involved made money but the later arrivals, unable to find new recruits, were left holding the bag.

"Glenn Turner had an 'impossible dream,' and for a time the dream became a sort of reality for him, for some of his associates and for those relatively few who got in on the ground floor," Moore added. "But for thousands of others it remained an impossible dream and a virtual financial nightmare.

"The impossible dream was the creation of a distribution network for the sale of cosmetics that was represented as offering an opportunity for untold riches for those who became involved in an 'endless chain' of recruiting distributors for this business and in selling Koscot products," he said.

Turner, whose "dare to be great" pitches made him a minor celebrity at one point, was tried last year on mail fraud charges but the trial ended in a hung jury and another trial has been scheduled.

Moore's decision, which can be appealed to or reviewed by the full commission, requires that Koscot Interplanetary

Inc., Glenn W. Turner Enterprises Inc., both of Orlando, Fla.; and three individuals, Turner, Ben Bunting and Hobart Wilder, make restitution to those who lost in the scheme.

Moore did not set a figure but he said there was evidence Koscot took in more than $44 million from August of 1967 to July of 1972 in initial fees from recruited "distributors."

Mayor Upset By 'Treatment'

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — As the table talk heated up in the poker game to find a way out of New York City's budget crisis, Republicans in control of the Senate today planned a meeting with the governor's special citizens group in search of advice on the city's dollar woes.

Mayor Abraham D. Beame left the State Capitol Tuesday complaining of the "shabby" treatment he had been accorded by Republicans, who had spent the day in a series of conferences on how to close New York City's estimated $641 million budget gap.

Senate Majority Leader Warren M. Anderson, unable to find a consensus among the seven GOP senators from New York City as to what kind of program cuts they would demand from Beame, rejected Beame's request for another extension of the deadline for submission of a proposed city budget.

Beame left for the city in a huff, saying he would meet with the Board of Estimate to draft a "balanced" budget that would be made public Friday.

The Tuesday meeting, between Gov. Hugh L. Carey, Anderson and the mayor, had been requested by Beame, prompting speculation that he was ready to compromise on his earlier request for additional state aid and authorization for new city taxes to close the budget shortage.

Anderson, in announcing that he and the seven senators would meet with the special four-member citizens panel named last week by Carey, stated that Beame "had not moved one inch."

The Binghamton Republican said the meeting would be to determine how the budget could be cut "to a level that people feel would restore confidence that the city is on firm ground again."

Anderson said, however, "We are not going to tell him where he should cut, we'll leave that up to Mayor Beame."

As Beame prepared to prepare to catch a plane back to New York, he told Capitol reporters he was "angry and disturbed" at the "shabby treatment" shown him by the GOP lawmakers in control of the Senate.

"To think that the mayor is sitting around from 9 to 5 (o'clock) waiting for an answer... this is an outrage," he said.

Anderson told newsmen after the last of at least a half-dozen meetings with various lawmakers, "It may be that we won't be able to reach a consensus until after we've seen the budget."

He said the problem was not whether more cuts were necessary, "but the level of cuts needed."

After Beame had left Albany, Carey issued his own statement critical of "the Senate majority."

"Whether the Senate's indecision is political procrastination or simply the inability to face a problem," Carey said, "every citizen of this state should be aware of the costs of escalation of the New York City financial crisis by more uncertainty."

Doctors, Employees Work Without Pay

NEW YORK (UPI) — Doctors and employees at Brooklyn Eye and Ear Hospital knew what they had to do Tuesday to keep the financially troubled hospital open. They decided to work without pay.

The hospital is faced with a $1.2 million operating deficit and an immediate $100,000 cash need.

"We're living from hand to mouth," said hospital president Dr. Abner Rosenberg. "What we need is about 15 angels to drop some gold bars on us."

Kitchen workers did their best Monday by scraping together $17.11 to pay for the day's bread bill.

And while the 110-bed facility's clinic was crowded to near capacity, about 100 doctors and staff members met in the cafeteria Tuesday and overwhelmingly agreed to keep the hospital running.

The rest of the hospital's residents and employees were elsewhere — either performing surgery or tending to the sick in the wards — but there appeared to be near unanimity among the entire 300-member staff.

"There's an absolutely wonderful rapport between employees, residents and the administration," said Dr. William Rand, the resident ophthalmic surgeon, who is leading the ad hoc effort to solicit contributions and maintain staff morale.

Many of the 85 attending physicians are considering donating their surgical fees for the week. Anesthesiologists are expected to take similar action.

Rand said $8,000 in donations had already been made by hospital employees and area residents, and he fingered a pile of about 75 unopened letters sent since the facility's dollar crisis became general knowledge Friday.

Nearly every letter contained a brief message of sympathy and a contribution ranging from $1 to $50.

According to Rosenberg, the hospital was brought to the brink of shutting down last Thursday because Blue Cross had reduced its prepayments for the month by about $150,000. In addition, he said, Blue Cross demanded that the hospital pay $32,000 for coverage for the facility's staff.

Rand said the goal of the staff was to solicit about $100,000 by the end of the

But, he said, a one-week reprieve was granted when the health insurer made a $35,000 prepayment on Friday to cover payroll expenses and the residents and employees voted to work this week without pay.

week "to restore the cash flow of the hospital."

Then, he said, "We can at least return to the same old method of making ends meet — brinkmanship financing."

Man Surrenders in Mauldin Assault

CHICAGO (UPI) — Attorney Thomas D. Flanagan, 37, surrendered to police Tuesday and was charged with assaulting Pulitzer Prize-winning cartoonist Bill Mauldin, who was attacked while photographing illegally parked cars at a party for Mayor Richard J. Daley's son.

Mauldin suffered a broken nose in the attack. Flanagan, apparently a former business associate of the mayor's son, was charged with simple battery in connection with the assault.

Flanagan's lawyer, Sherman C. Magidson, promptly filed a counter-complaint and an arrest warrant was issued charging Mauldin with battery. Police said it probably would be a couple of days before the warrant is processed. Magidson refused to elaborate on the complaint against Mauldin.

Mauldin, contacted at a Chicago hotel where he lives, said, "If papers are to be served, I await service. This whole thing is now in the hands of the law."

Mauldin was attacked on a street outside a cocktail party for John P. Daley and his fiancée, Mary Lou Briatta. The party was hosted by Flanagan's brother, James, 38, president and co-owner of the Heil and Heil insurance and real estate agency, for which John Daley once worked. Thomas Flanagan was listed as secretary of the Heil and Heil office in Evanston.

Heil and Heil was the target of a Cook County grand jury investigation last year after it was learned that Mayor Daley had ordered a massive switch of city insurance to Heil and Heil, where John Daley worked at the time.

The younger Daley received about $150,000 in broker's commissions as a result of the switch.

Mauldin said he was visiting a Sun-Times executive at a nearby apartment when he was told about 20 cars double-parked outside the party. Police began to tag and tow the illegally parked cars, he said, and he decided to photograph the scene. Suddenly, Mauldin said, a number of "personnel" appeared and started to remove the cars.

He said one of the drivers climbed out of a station wagon, walked up to him and said, "I'll give you something to take a picture of." Mauldin's wife said the man slugged him in the face, kned him in the groin and threw his camera in his face before fleeing in a taxi.

Britain's Worst Road Disaster: 32 Killed on Sightseeing Bus

DIBBLE'S BRIDGE, England (UPI) — "It was awful," Richard Wallace said. "A terrible mess. The roof was squashed down so much you couldn't get inside."

The Yorkshire farmer witnessed the worst road disaster in British history — the crash of a busload of women sightseers in the scenic coastal countryside.

The bus smashed through a stone parapet on Dibble's Bridge Tuesday and plunged 25 feet to a field below, killing the male driver and 31 women passengers.

A fleet of ambulances rushed the 14 surviving passengers to nearby Airedale Hospital but doctors said many had severe injuries and were not expected to live.

Authorities said no other vehicle was involved in the accident, which took place exactly 50 years after a similar crash claimed nine lives.

Witnesses said the bus flipped over and landed on a field beside the Dibb River, throwing out two of the women but trapping the rest inside the wreckage. Some were stuck in broken windows.

Firemen used acetylene cutters to slice through the twisted metal and extricate the dead and injured from the wreckage.

Lincoln Seligman, who witnessed the crash from his nearby country cottage, said most of the terrified passengers were trapped inside the wrecked bus or caught in the shattered windows.

The victims, residents of the Thornaby area on England's northeast coast, were on a day's outing to the Yorkshire Dales some 200 miles north of London.

The crash, Britain's worst road disaster, surpassed the 20 persons killed in August, 1969, when a bus plunged off a bridge in County Durham.

The trip was organized by Mrs. Dorothy White, a former mayor of the village Thornaby, and her neighbor, Mrs. Jennie Lowe. The two women, known in the village for their charity and welfare work, died in the crash.

'Women Are the Heart of the Home'

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (UPI) — Annette Stern never questioned whether life as wife, mother and homemaker was worth it. "Women," she says proudly, "are the heart of the home, and the home is the heart of America."

She believes that raising her three sons and building a good family life is as important as any other contribution a woman could make.

She is staunchly against the Equal Rights Amendment.

Over the years, as the women's liberation movement grew, Mrs. Stern came to believe that "young women were constantly being propagandized out of the home. The role of homemaker was constantly being denigrated."

A year ago, while listening to an all-day radio program on "What Women Want," Mrs. Stern got mad because none of the women on the show wanted anything to do with the family way of life. She also heard a lot of talk about the need to pass the ERA, but little about what the amendment would do to the status of women who elected to remain housewives and mothers.

"I decided to do a little poll—I asked women about ERA at the supermarket, at the dentist's office, at Little League games, wherever I happened to be. I interviewed 93 women and 87 never heard of ERA, and the others thought all it meant was equal pay for equal work."

She was convinced that "somebody had to represent the type of woman I respect, the type of women who feels the home is important."

On May 8, 1974, Mrs. Stern hosted a meeting of 200 neighborhood housewives and mothers in her home. The result of that meeting was the creation of WUNDER—Women United to Defend Existing Rights. Their slogan: "It's WUNDERful to be a woman."

Mrs. Stern said that "in the past" women were discriminated against in three areas: employment, education and credit. "We must take these problems one at a time, each on its merits," she said. "There is no need to change the Constitution."

According to WUNDER literature, ERA would "invalidate all state laws which require the husband to financially support his wife ... will wipe out a woman's present freedom of choice to take a paying job or to be a fulltime wife and mother supported by her husband ... (and) will wipe out protective labor laws which benefit women."

With all of her anti-ERA work, Mrs. Stern has had to spend hours away from her home. "All I wanted was to be a good mother and homemaker," she said. "I never thought I'd have to lobby for it."

'Heart of the Home'

Annette Stern, doing a bit of gardening at her home in suburban Harrison, New York, never questioned whether life as wife, mother and homemaker was worth it. "Women," she says proudly, "are the heart of the home, and the home is the heart of America." She is staunchly against the Equal Rights Amendment. (UPI)

Mother Supports ERA Because of Daughters

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Diana Hobby doesn't believe she ever will need protection from sex discrimination, but she supports the Equal Rights Amendment because of her daughters.

"I think I'm already a very privileged and lucky person in every way," said the wife of Texas Lt. Gov. William Hobby. "But all of my divorced, widowed and single friends have to buck inequality in pay, jobs, credit and many times in education."

"I'd like to think my daughters will not be hampered by the handicaps that would be laid upon them if the Equal Rights Amendment is not adopted," she said.

The Hobbys have four children—girls 16 and 10 and boys 14 and 12. Mrs. Hobby works in her husband's office in the morning but goes home before the children get out of school.

She is not a women's libber, at least of the stereotyped mold.

"The term to me is meaningless," she said. "I grew up in a family without men. There was no such thing as boy work or girl work because there weren't any boys. It never occurred to me that those things had to be divided and separated."

Mrs. Hobby, 44, is a Phi

Beta Kappa graduate of Radcliffe and taught English literature at Chatham Hall, a Virginia boarding school, before her marriage in 1954 to the son of a former Texas governor and the publisher of the Houston Post. She has a master's degree from Georgetown University.

She was the Post's book editor for 10 years, taking a leave of absence to move to Austin when Hobby was elected lieutenant governor in 1972.

"I miss it a lot. I get the feeling that I'm spinning my wheels. There's nothing at the end of the week that I can lay out that I've accomplished."

Mrs. Hobby never even took maternity leave with her children. "I never went to the hospital without a typewriter." And she even arranged her schedule to go home and breast feed her children.

"Of course not everybody's job can be that flexible," she said. "In any employment situation your working wife has got to be the weakest link and your employer knows that and leans on it."

She said women face the most discrimination in employment.

ERA opponents contend adoption of the constitutional amendment would mean women will be subject to the draft and have to go to the bathroom with men.

"Being for ERA doesn't mean you take leave of your common senses," Mrs. Hobby said. Men and women already use common restrooms on airplanes she points out, saying, "It's never bothered me much."

CERRITOS, Calif. (UPI) — "We can take pride in Pat Nixon," the speaker said, and the crowd cheered.

"It's good to be back home," said the former first lady, making her first solo public appearance since her husband resigned the presidency. She told an audience of 500 at the recent dedication of the Patricia Nixon Elementary School in the town where she grew up that she's not dead yet.

She and her former home appeared glad to see each other. Cheering students met her limousine and she got a standing ovation in the auditorium, draped with red-white-and-blue "Welcome Mrs. Nixon" signs.

Mrs. Nixon, 63, told the invitation-only audience of parents, school administrators and civic leaders that "I'm proud to have the school carry my name. I always thought that only those who have gone had schools named after them."

"I'm happy to tell you that I'm not gone—I mean not really gone," she said. The audience gave a friendly laugh.

It was an all-American ceremony. The school band wore red-white-and-blue ponchos. The chorus of school children sang "Yankee Doodle," "This Land Is Our Land," and "Battle Hymn of the Republic."

Twenty four boys and girls, each representing one of the classrooms, placed a single yellow rose apiece in a basket. Most appeared nervous at the attention and some, terrified, had to be prompted to smile. Mrs. Nixon smiled back at them all. Two girls handed her the basket, and she kissed them.

Born Thelma Ryan in a Nevada mining town, she grew up here, spending 15 years on a small farm just south of Los Angeles, keeping house for her brothers and widowed father.

Mrs. Nixon nodded to some of her old friends and acquaintances in the audience, including elderly Mary Bragg, one of her grade school teachers. The city fathers decided to name two new schools for Miss Bragg, a long time teacher, and Mrs. Nixon, "to honor women trained as educators."

Mrs. Nixon was an education graduate from USC. The only mention of her husband came in the invocation by the Rev. Edward Smith who asked God to bless Mrs. Nixon "and her partner, and hold him, too, in a healing and redeeming way."

Mrs. Nixon, her eyes closed in prayer, had no reaction. An hour later she was back in her limousine, surrounded by Secret Service agents, heading down the freeway to San Clemente, 80 miles to the south.

Making Tracks Back to Nature

CONFLUENCE, Pa. (UPI) — In the heyday of the railroad, John Cominsky ran many a freight train through the rolling hills of the Allegheny Mountains, moving eastward along the Youghiogheny River, past the white rapids at Ohioyle, Flaherty Creek and Big Savage Mountain.

But the heyday of the railroad is over, abandoned to the harsh realities of refinancing, bankruptcy and rail abandonment.

Cominsky took the Western Maryland Railway passenger train on a final run through the 122-year-old right-of-way this month. The 60-mile stretch will be turned back to its natural state.

Although the railway and its crew are leaving, Cominsky says he is happy that the hills, the lush forest, the mayapple and mountain laurel will not go unappreciated.

The Western Maryland, which decided it could no longer afford the cost of maintaining the track, has begun legal procedures for deeding the land to the Western Pennsylvania Conservancy for development into a mountain trail for hikers and bicyclists.

Cominsky, a 28-year veteran of the railways, is taking the end of the 60-mile Connellsville, Pa., to Hancock, Md., run in stride. He has come to accept the financial pressures brought to bear on the railways.

"Like any other industry, this one is so modified you can't even remember what it was like when you started out," Cominsky said.

He has seen many of the changes—dieselization, the longer trains, and then longer cars.

The railroad already has begun ripping up the old ties and rails, and the Conservancy has begun sketchy plans for the trail. The River Gorge Trail, according to Conservancy members, will be one of the longest and most beautiful "railroad trails" in the country.

Railway ordinances require that the maximum grade for all right-of-ways be less than 3 per cent—a three-foot rise in 100 feet—ideal for cycling.

The Conservancy, which is now looking to the state or National Park Service for financial help, says it is also considering some type of transportation through the right-of-way by some "inoffensive," possibly electric, vehicle.

Nature groups are considering building campsites along the trail so that hikers can stop along the way and enjoy canoeing or rubber raft rides in the white rapids of the Youghiogheny.

The completion of the hiking and bicycle trail is two to four years off. But nature enthusiasts can begin walking on the trail as soon as the tracks are torn up.

For the Western Maryland, times won't change much—just locations. It will continue to wind its freight trains along the B&O tracks opposite the river.

Solar Power Comes Into Its Own

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Solar power, little more than an interesting oddity before the 1973-74 energy crisis, is coming into its own.

The energy crisis spurred many new developments for the practical application of solar power. But as the quadrupling price of oil turned more and more home owners' thoughts toward the power of the sun, they found few builders and few home heating experts knew much about the developments that were taking place.

In an effort to solve this problem, about 50 companies offering products to tap the abundant power of the sun have gathered for the first major solar energy trade show ever held.

The International Solar Industry Expo 75, continuing here through Thursday, is jointly sponsored by the Federal Energy Administration, the Energy Research and Development Administration and the Solar Energy Industries Association.

"We are pleased to lend our support to ... this exposition, which is the ideal forum for the public, the government and the solar industry to gauge our progress in the solar area," said FEA chief Frank G. Zarb.

Three of the products on display offer an example of the wide range of applications now available to home owners and businesses.

Corning Glass Works is unveiling with this show a new solar heating tube said by private and government experts alike to be two or three times better than traditional solar collectors.

The secret of the new Corning collector lies in its blend of TV tube technology with a special glass that transmits more of the sun's energy than conventional window glass.

A solar collector captures the sun's heat and transfers it to a liquid which is then circulated into some type of exchange unit to keep a building or house warm. Most such collectors are flat, but the new Corning unit looks like a bank of fluorescent tubes four inches in diameter and up to 10 feet long.

A Corning official said banks of these tubes could be mounted on exterior walls or roofs to heat a special liquid, flowing through a collector plate inside the tube, to temperatures as high as 250 to 300 degrees Fahrenheit.

"The high performance of the ... collectors is mainly the result of the vacuum (inside the tube)," he said.

Another device on display heats air directly and is described by its inventor, the International Solarthermics Corp. of Nederland, Colo., as the first plug-in solar furnace ever designed for home use.

Unlike liquid solar collectors, the solar furnace looks like an A-frame building the size of a tool shed and can sit in a home owner's back yard.

It captures the heat of the sun and transfers it to air that is circulated through heating ducts already in a house.

The third product, also a breakthrough in its field, converts sunlight directly into electricity. It is a special type of solar cell.

Solar cells were invented in the early 1950s, and have long been used aboard spacecraft, but their high cost and low efficiency prevented their widespread application on earth.

However, a cell designed by the Solarex Corp. of Rockville, Md., has made a breakthrough in both cost and efficiency, according to company officials.

Only a week ago, the Federal Aviation Administration announced it would use the new solar cells to power an instrument landing system beacon at an airport in Alaska.

—the first time crucial airport navigation aids have ever been powered by the sun.

Potato Growers Going Broke

BOISE, Idaho (UPI) — The nation's potato growers are going broke on the lowest prices paid for their spuds since the Great Depression 40 years ago. In Idaho, the biggest producer, farmers are openly hiring illegal aliens to cut costs.

To the consumer who paid up to 15 cents a pound for potatoes in some grocery stores earlier this year and up to 10 cents a pound more recently, it's difficult to believe farmers from Idaho to Maine are going broke at a penny a pound.

But it's happening from coast to coast even though freshmarket prices appear once again to be on the rise, a United Press International survey shows.

For a variety of reasons, not the least of which was the weather, small potato harvests led to good prices for the 1972 and 1973 crops—hitting a high of 14 cents a pound paid to farmers last May. Demand exceeded spud supply. Then a bumper crop last fall sent them crashing to the Depression-era price of a cent a pound this winter.

Not since 1935 have the prices paid farmers for their spuds been so low. And they plummeted at a time of inflationary production costs where fertilizer prices tripled in Suffolk County, N.Y. Electricity and other utility costs are way up, as is the price of field labor. Farmers in eastern Idaho illegally paid Mexican nationals in the United States up to $800 a month to haul irrigation pipes in the fields.

"If they happened to take those wetbacks away from us, we'd be in serious trouble," said Del Ray Holm of Roberts, Idaho, national potato chairman for the National Farmers Organization. "It isn't the money. We have to pay these Mexicans the same prices as we pay the others. You just can't get the others to do the work."

Max Huntsman, director of the Potato Growers of Idaho, said some farmers have gone bankrupt while others are going into crops that do not have the high risk of potatoes.

In eastern Idaho it costs about $840 an acre to produce between 225 and 250 onehundred-pound sacks of potatoes. Simple arithmetic shows a farmer paid $1 a sack for his produce is losing money at $225 to $250 an acre.

Edwin Stasney of Malin, Ore., vice chairman of the Oregon Potato Commission and a member of the National Potato Board and National Potato Council, said the freshmarket price has risen to about four cents a pound in recent weeks. But even that is one cent below the break-even point, he said.

To call attention to their plight, some Idaho farmers gave away 70 tons of spuds in Boise and in Salt Lake City, Utah. Others sold them off trucks in parking lots direct to consumers and they made money. But these and other farm product sales caused the NFO to lose its tax-exempt status.

Giveaways occurred elsewhere, too. In Baker, Minn., the Rev. Clifford Deaton, pastor of the Westminster Presbyterian Church, organized a drive to haul potatoes to Minneapolis and St. Paul to be given away. So far, about 800,000 pounds have been delivered to the Twin Cities for distribution to the poor.

Idaho's Potato Commission mounted a national contest to stimulate consumer interest in the state's famous spuds while its attorney general brought a lawsuit against neighboring Washington state to prohibit use of the term "Idaho" potatoes.

Holm said some farmers won't plant potatoes this year. "They're going to phase out and grow grain, especially the smaller growers," he said.

Because of the low prices earlier this year, some of the farmers cannot pay off bank loans on their 1974 crops. These probably will not get crop loans again this year, Holm said.

Some growers, such as Holm, who operates Clar-Del Farms with his brother, Claren, have been able to hang onto their spuds and wait for higher prices. Early this month, Holm sold one cellar of spuds for $3.75 per hundred-pound sack.

But he's worried about the year ahead. Electricity to run his deep well pumps for irrigation will cost him at least 35 percent more this year than last and could be as much as 80 percent higher if the state's Public Utilities Commission grants a power company's requested increase.

In Maine, the plight of the potato farmer is compounded by financial problems of that state's major potato processor. American Kitchen Food-Potato Service has been unable to pay farmers for crops they sold last fall. That in turn has led to borrowing problems for those who need money to plant their spring crops.

Lowell Weeks, executive vice president of the Maine Potato Council, said even though marketing of Maine potatoes has been successful the immediate future is dim for the Maine grower.

In Idaho, a long, hard winter and an uncommonly wet spring have delayed spring field work by 30 days. As a result, the yield could be off as much as 30 percent.

If demand is high and production low the price could shoot up and the farmers may make out all right although the consumer will pay even higher prices.

But it will cost farmers just as much to produce a small yield as it would a large one if they plant the same ground and they could get caught again in a financial pinch. There are some indications that farmers throughout the nation are planning to plant fewer acres to potatoes this year, too.

Frank W. Thompson, 36, who farms 450 acres of potato land in the Red River Valley of western Minnesota, said he and his brothers plan to plant the same number of acres this year.

"You can't jump in and out of potato growing," he said.

Thomas Conklin, 44, who farms 350 acres in the Water Mill-Bridgehampton area of Suffolk County, N.Y., agrees.

"I gave some thought to conversion, but the technology I possess, the machines I have, and the fellows who work for me are still tuned in to potatoes," he said.

Some experts say the potato market is "inelastic"—that is, consumers do not change their eating habits because of price, at least not when it comes to the old Irish staple. But Thompson disagrees.

"I can't believe there are any more saleable potatoes this year than last," he said. "I don't like the word surplus. People just changed their eating habits, I think, partly due to the unemployment situation."

How to make great tasting coffee.

Start with a clean pot. Be sure it is shiny clean before each use. Even a slight amount of old coffee adhering to the pot can keep you from getting the fresh, clean taste of perfectly-made coffee.

2.

Measure carefully. For each cup of coffee, use 6 ounces of cold water, and one slightly rounded tablespoon of coffee. You may vary the strength by using slightly more or less coffee. But, when you've learned your family's preference, be scrupulous about using the same measurements each time.

3.

Use a great coffee. Folger's has an extra-good taste no other coffee matches—because Folger's has a very special blend. Even its aroma seems to tell you that Folger's is extra rich and delicious. And Folger's is mountain-grown—the richest tasting coffee there is!

We Hold These Truths... A Chronicle of America

May 31, 1775:

Reputedly at the urgings of a Colonel Adam Alexander, the frontiersmen of Mecklenburg County, North Carolina, assemble in Charlotte to devise ways and means for aiding the people of Massachusetts. The convention adopts 20 resolutions saying, in part, that "all laws and commissions... of the King or Parliament are annulled and revoked." (Subsequently, the resolutions are thought by some to have inspired the Declaration of Independence, but the resolutions never found their way into the record of the Continental Congress. Jefferson believed the resolutions to have been a hoax.) The records of the proceedings are destroyed by fire in 1800. But a copy of a Charlestown newspaper dated June 16, 1775 — discovered in 1847 — apparently contains the full text of the resolutions. The word "independence" does not appear in them.

Bad Bill

The House Education and Labor Committee has before it a measure which would allow child labor under some circumstances. It would authorize the secretary of labor to set aside child labor provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act when he finds that they would cause the petitioning employer "economic disruption." It is a bad bill which ought to be rejected.

The argument is made that in some harvesting situations—strawberry picking in Washington and Oregon, for example—children 5 to 12 years old could work in the fields without harm. This may be so, but that is far from being the only pertinent consideration.

A constitutional question would be raised by permitting the waiver of statutory provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act in some circumstances but not in others, at the discretion of the secretary of labor.

This would substitute administrative action, based on vaguely defined standards, for the normal functioning of the act.

Another valid point is that allowing farmers to hire children under 12 could be expected to have two undesirable results. This practice would deny jobs to older children and adults, a particularly important consideration in times of high unemployment. It also would tend to depress farm labor wages in the area.

Above all, this bill is unacceptable because child labor is anathema, both socially and economically a bad thing. The long-standing American consensus upholding this view should not be ignored in Congress.

WASHINGTON—President Ford made an impassioned appeal to congressional leaders the other day for a return to a bipartisan foreign policy.

He called them into the Roosevelt Room next to his office, closed the doors and told them frankly: "The situation ain't good fellows."

Then he added earnestly: "We face a harsh reality. The national interest requires closer working together between Congress and the President."

"We ought to stress the need for a whole new era of bipartisanship," echoed Rep. William Broomfield, R-Mich., the top Republican on the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

"Some people want to save money at the expense of defense," noted Rep. Phillip Burton, D-Calif., the Democratic caucus chairman. He asked the President, "How do you deal with it?"

"Look at the broad spectrum and it's obvious," said the President, "that this is no time to knock hell out of our insurance policy."

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger tried to assess the impact of the U.S. setbacks in Southeast Asia upon the rest of the world.

"We can never prove the impact on the Mideast. We lost some edge there, I think," he said. "Japan's prime minister is coming over to ask questions."

Then Kissinger, too, became solemn. "This is a setback, and we're going to pay for it," he said. "We can salvage something through a bipartisan undertaking in our future foreign policy conduct."

Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott turned to the President, who will take over the Mideast negotiations from Kissinger this month. "Can we return to step-by-step negotiations in the Mideast?" asked Scott.

"God knows we tried," was all the President had to say.

WALLACE'S WALLOP: Alabama's Gov. George Wallace could wind up with 35 percent of the delegates at the 1976 Democratic convention, in the opinion of Democratic National Chairman Robert Strauss.

The shrewd Strauss has told close associates that, at worst, Wallace can count on 22 percent of the delegates. If the crippled Alabamian can keep up the pace, he will go to the convention with over one-third of the delegates, Strauss predicted.

This would mean the Democrats can expect their first multi-ballot convention since 1952 when Adlai Stevenson finally beat out Sen. Estes Kefauver, D-Tenn., for the presidential nomination.

Although Wallace hasn't formally announced his candidacy, he already has amassed a $3 million campaign chest and is preparing a schedule that will take him to 30 states.

The confidential Wallace plans call for skipping the New Hampshire primary. He will make appearances in California, Florida, Indiana, Maryland, Mississippi, North Carolina and Wisconsin, among other states.

Footnote: Our sources are wholly reliable, but Strauss would not confirm whether he had used the 35 and 22 percent figures. "I've specifically refused to make any public comment with respect to the strengths and weaknesses of possible candidates," he said. "I'd like to be known, above all, as a chairman who chaired a totally fair convention."

WASHINGTON WHIRL: President Ford told Republican leaders bluntly the other day that he will fight to remain in the White House next year and that he expects their support. Sources close to the President say he has the full approval of his wife, Betty, who earlier had wanted him to get out of politics. . . . Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, according to

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — President Ford's continuation of a Southern political strategy in a form too diluted to be recognized by its original architects, Richard M. Nixon and John Mitchell, is emerging from backstage efforts to satisfy Southern Republican complaints over voting rights legislation.

For weeks the Southerners have failed to persuade the Ford administration to propose, as Nixon did, that the 1965 Voting Rights Act — now limited to seven Southern states — be extended nationwide. Now, however, the administration is privately offering them a quarter-loaf: a future presidential statement of intent to apply the bill administratively to all 50 states.

That is most unsatisfying to the Southerners. "It's a chicken way to do it," a prominent Southern Republican told us. "Ford's trying to get off the hook." Indeed, the President's approach could make him vulnerable to a Ronald Reagan challenge for the nomination or to a George Wallace third-party candidacy.

This vividly contrasts the Nixon and Ford Southern strategies. Whereas Nixon and then Atty. Gen. Mitchell put highest priority on winning Southern voters at the risk of offending non-Southerners, Mr. Ford gambles in the opposite direction. He has consciously decided against an abrasively pro-Southern stance on racial matters, gambling that Southerners will prefer him to Reagan and Wallace as the most realistic alternative to a liberal Democrat.

Although the issue no longer excites Southern passion as did its passage in 1965 or its 1970 five-year renewal, Southern sensibilities still rankle at being singled out for federal enforcement of black voting rights. Consequently, from the moment he became President, Mr. Ford was importuned by Southern Republicans to follow Nixon's 1970 example for nationwide application of the law.

The principal importuner was Clarke Reed, longtime Republican state chairman of Mississippi. For months, he buttonholed top administrators figures — up to, but not including, Mr. Ford himself — with this message: even if you lose in Congress as Nixon did in 1970, you will win in the South by proposing a 50-state extension.

There was no favorable response. When Southern Republican state chairmen met secretly with top White House aides in Washington last month, Reed raised the voting rights question once again.

Donald Rumsfeld, Mr. Ford's chief of staff, gave no encouragement.

As Congressmen in 1965, both Mr. Ford and Rumsfeld opposed limiting the Voting Rights Act to the Deep South. They have not changed their minds, but want to avoid Nixon-Mitchell liberal-baiting. While Nixon declared no bill at all might be better than one limited to the South, the Ford White House opposes Reed's proposal because it might slow or jeopardize renewal of the Voting Rights Act.

But conservative Republican Dean Burch, heading Mr. Ford's campaign for the nomination, picked up disturbing Southern signals the last two weeks. When asked by Burch to sign up for Mr. Ford, some Southerners have refused, citing the Ford position on voting rights as a reason. Coincidentally or not, rethinking has begun in the administration, led by two officials regarded as "liberals" by the Southern conservatives: James Cannon, former aide to Vice President Nelson Rockefeller and now Domestic Council staff director, and J. Stanley Pottinger, Assistant Attorney General for civil rights.

The result is this compromise, not yet approved by Mr. Ford himself, the President will say nothing until passage of a Voting Rights Act renewal. On signing the bill, Mr. Ford will declare a new policy: the Attorney General will use powers, claimed by Justice Department lawyers to be contained in Section 3 (C) of the present act, to send federal observers north as well as south to flush out racial discrimination in voting.

This approach has been tested privately by the administration with both Reed and NAACP lobbyist Clarence Mitchell (another striking contrast to Nixon days, when the White House could not care less what the NAACP thought). Their first responses: favorable.

But the administration might do well to check back with Reed for his considered and highly critical later judgment. It mirrors the private assessment of a Nixon White House aide who was a key Southern strategist. He believes Mr. Ford should have agreed to Reed's original proposal and feels the proposed quarter-loaf is so transparently condescending it will hurt, not help, in the South.

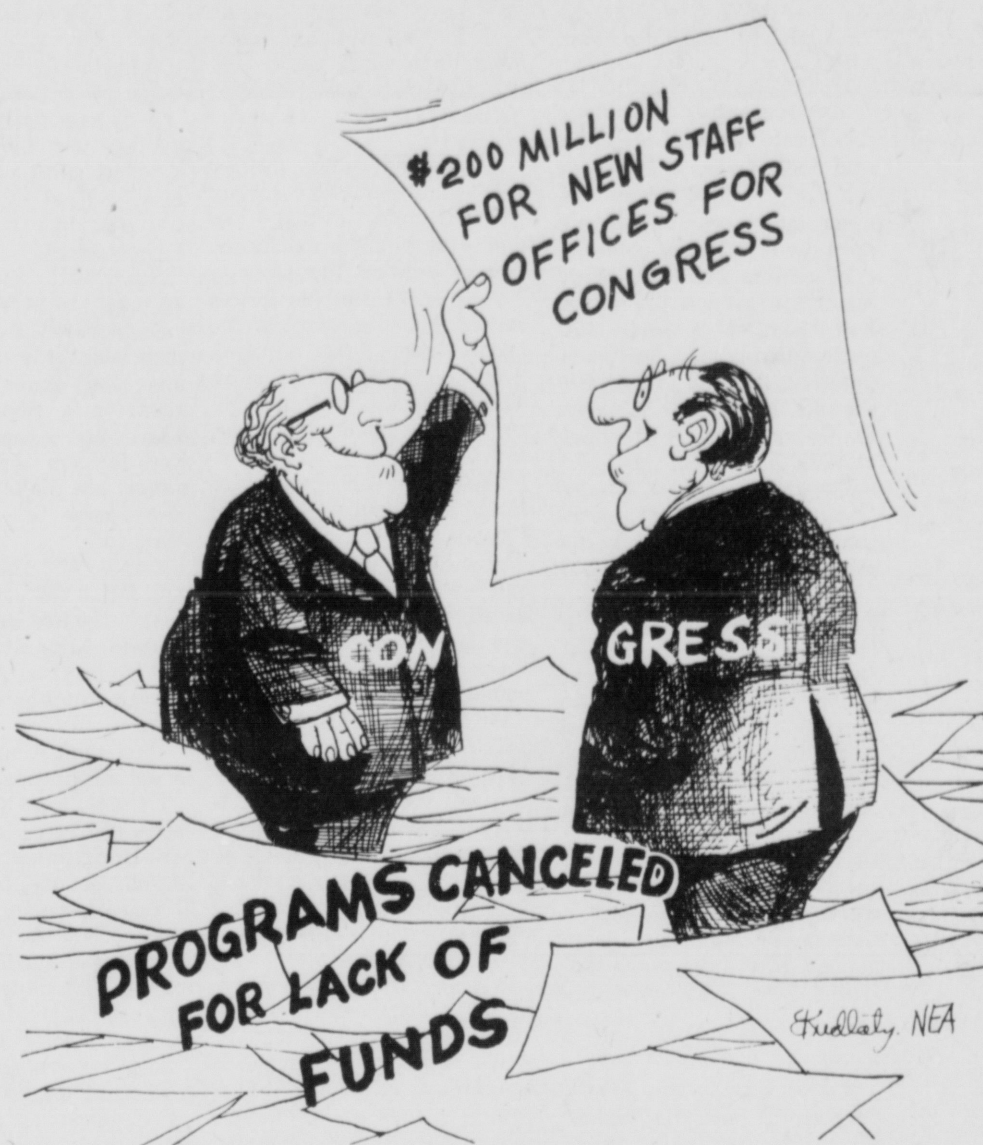

This former Nixon operative goes on to say, however, that Mr. Ford might get away with it. With voting rights a fading issue, he believes Mr. Ford could become invulnerable to damage from Wallace or Reagan by continuing the present momentum from the Mayaguez incident and vetoes of liberal legislation.

If so, Gerald Ford's Southern position is precisely the opposite of Richard Nixon's. Nixon so firmly associated himself with Southern resentment against outside harassment that the South would forgive him for liberal deviations. Lacking such brotherhood with the Southern ethos, Mr. Ford may have to distill a conservatism free of the slightest imperfection on basic domestic and foreign issues.

Inside Report

President's Diluted Southern Comfort

Jim Bishop: Reporter

Terror Inside the Embassy Walls

A great story is the wedding of an event to a reporter. It must be unusual and have impact, an affinity to the reader. A reporter can ruin it by overstating. When such an event occurs — great or small — the writer whispers his words tenderly, almost timidly.

We have read some great ones. I recall, in particular, Tillman Durdin's story, 40 years ago in The New York Times, called "The Rape of Nanking." The Japanese Army had besieged the walled city. The resistance of the Chinese humiliated them.

Durdin was there when the walls were breached. Almost casually, he related the terror of Nanking, the people of a great city running from streets to alleys to sewers.

It was a time of torches, of great black smoke staining the soul of a blue sky. It was a time of rape, when Japanese forced Chinese husbands to watch. Women were disemboweled. Men of all ages were shot. Civic leaders were beheaded in public squares.

Bodies rotted and sickened the city. The living were told to pile the dead inside the walls. In time came Durdin's adroit touch. The pile was so high that Japanese did not have to depart by Nanking's gates. They walked up the staircase of bodies and left the city.

The best story of Indochina, in my opinion, was written by Jean-Jacques Caxaux of Agence France-Presse. Some editors spiked it. Some buried it. He was in the French embassy at Phnom Penh. An embassy is extraterritorial. Sacred. It cannot be violated by either side in a war.

Cambodians who feared the coming of the Khmer Rouge stormed the gates. So did Russians, Pakistanis, Vietnamese, Laotians and others. In a day, 1,200 persons were inside. The French ambassador had departed, leaving the mansion, the grounds and the problems to a conscientious consul named Jean Dyrac.

M. Dyrac tried to keep his sanity by taking drugs. The ultimate symbol of all wars was budding: men panicked, survivors despised each other. All crouched in terror waiting, hating the deafening silence of the city streets outside the gates.

The escalloped gardens were trampled. Period French furniture was ruined. The foreigners insisted that the presence of 600 Cambodians imperiled all. Frenchmen in hysteria demanded that Consul Dyrac order the Cambodians to leave.

The Consul felt crushed. He gave the order. The Cambodians — the only natives within the walls of the embassy — marched out with a little dignity to whatever torture and death lay around the corner.

Food ran low. The Vietnamese demanded rice. Women shrieked that they had no milk for their babies. The last viable automobile, a Mercedes, was used by Asians who cooked meals on the hood.

The Laotians lived on marijuana and dreams of a world rich which had died. Six Russians marched back and forth in the gardens. Pakistanis sold silk saris to Europeans who paid in Cambodian rials — worthless.

The Caucasians banded together and said the Asians were plotting against them. Everyone kept secrets and secret food, even from friends. A few months ago, the snobbish Europeans sailed on their picnics, paying Asians to do the rowing. Now the Asians spat at the despised foreigners.

Day by day, hour by hour, everything grew worse. Cowards with guns became dangerous. Morals were forgotten. The French no longer referred to "the slaves in the streets." Dyrac used his radio to report detailed despair to Paris.

A few men married their oriental mistresses. Those who had no air conditioners used ice picks on cooling units. Someone remembered water-skiing and burst into tears. For 14 days, the street outside remained empty. All water faucets went dry.

The stench of the living was bad. Proud, rich women scratched their former servants for a piece of fish. Cambodian officers in civilian clothing scurried along walls like rats trying to reach the embassy. They were shot begging for a mercy they never learned to accord to anyone else.

On the 15th day, the Khmer Rouge arrived. They violated the sanctity of the French embassy. Jean Dyrac was told that his 600 survivors would be taken in open trucks, without food or shelter, on a one-week ride to the Thai border and safety.

Suddenly, he broke. He sat at his desk and buried his face on his arms and sobbed. The reporter, Jean-Jacques Caxaux, was embarrassed. He wrote: "Dyrac said what had to be said of all of us: 'We are no longer men.'"

New Blue Spruce for George Washington School

Putting their newfound knowledge to work, Peter Dyshuk's sixth grade class at George Washington School recently planted a blue spruce in front of the school, dedicated to school principal John Ascarino. The class had just completed a unit on trees, plants, and animals. Engaged in the planting were (l-r): Danny Meisner with shovel; Michael Landi with pail; Andy Hricisak with rake; and Lisa Gewant with tree. (Freeman photo)

Nursing Home Workshop

Mrs. Selma Einhorn (R) of the Kingsbrook Jewish Medical Center, served as leader for the first of a series of workshops for nursing home personnel being hosted by Ulster County Community College. Looking on are Robert T. Brown, UCCC president, Ms. Arlene Reynolds (standing), professional assistant in the Office for Continuing Education, and Mrs. Edna Gardenier, program coordinator. Mrs. Einhorn spoke on stimulation techniques for the institutionalized aged to representatives of 10 area nursing homes. Future workshops will deal with the biological-physiological, psychological and social aspect of aging.

Citizens Committee Head Doubts Cementon Plant Will Be Built

CATSKILL "I am very confident that the nuclear power plant will never be built in Greene County," said H. Lee Davis, president of the Citizens to Preserve the Hudson Valley (CPHV), after the Power Authority of the State of New York (PASNY) announced Cementon as the site for a proposed 1,200 megawatt nuclear power plant.

"This confidence is not based on wild hopes but on an analysis of the trends now evolving throughout the world," Davis said. "The pro-motors of nuclear power have reached their peak in their efforts to sell the world on taking this disastrous course.

"Largely through the efforts of citizen groups, the public and our elected officials are just now becoming aware of all the problems involved in the nuclear fission process.

"Of course, we cannot just sit back and feel that the stopping of nuclear power will happen by itself. Rest assured that the nuclear interests, of which PASNY is a vital part, are going to fight right down to the first holocaust to protect the billions of dollars of profits they expect to extract from the pockets of the American people."

Davis said it is the proposed Nuclear Regulatory Commission policy to build nuclear power parks which would incorporate as many as five or six nuclear generating plants, along with temporary storage facilities (number of years unknown) and processing plants all at one site. If this is adopted, it undoubtedly would mean closing all the cement plants and extending the nuclear area to the residential area,

Ford at West Point

WEST POINT President Gerald R. Ford will deliver the commencement address for the class of 1975 at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, the White House has announced. Ford will be the sixth President to hand out diplomas to the graduating cadets since Theodore Roosevelt did it in 1902. President Kennedy in 1962 was the last commander-in-chief to deliver the graduation address at the academy.

Commencement ceremonies will be held Wednesday, June 4 starting at 10 a.m. at Michie Stadium on the academy grounds. The President's visit will follow on the heels of a foreign affairs tour that will see Ford hold a series of meetings with NATO heads of state, as well as Egyptian President Anwar Sadat. The President will be greeted by Academy officials upon his arrival at West Point, and the chief executive will be presented a class gift by Cadet First Captain James Abcouwer at the graduation ceremonies.

President Ford was encouraged to speak at the graduation by Cadet Robert Johnson, the Army football captain, when the President presented Johnson with the American Cancer Society's Courage Award last March at the White House. At that time, Ford indicated he would attempt to fulfill the request.

While graduation day, especially with the visit of their commander-in-chief, will be a special occasion for the cadets, who have survived four years at the Academy, it will also have special significance for underclassmen who still have time remaining at the Point. Many of the underclassmen will be anxiously awaiting one key phrase from the President:

"I remit all ordinary punishments." The remission of punishments at the Academy is a tradition for visiting heads of state.

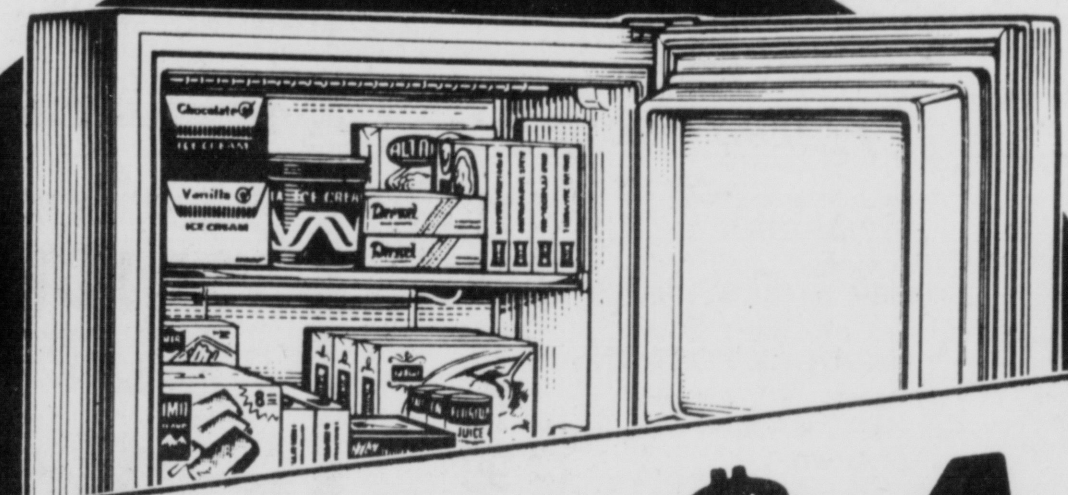

The commencement exercises will culminate a week of activities at West Point (June Week), including receptions, ceremonies and hops. Many alumni of the academy will return to West Point for graduation and class reunions and General Alexander Haig and astronaut Frank Borman, both of whom have sons in the graduating class, are expected to attend.

Last year's graduation speaker was Secretary of the Army Howard Callaway.

Robert J. Nelson, son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Nelson of 2117 West Saugerties Road, Saugerties, salutatorian of this year's graduating class at Marist College in Poughkeepsie, is one of 30 college graduates throughout the state to be awarded the Herbert H. Lehman Graduate Fellowship in social science and Public and International Affairs.

Recipients may receive up to $19,000 for four years of graduate study.

A resident of Poughkeepsie, Nelson will pursue doctoral studies in political science at Columbia University, where he will specialize in African studies. Columbia is offering him a full tuition fellowship and a $2,000 stipend. Cornell University and the University of Chicago also offered him full tuition scholarships and he was accepted at the University of California at Berkeley.

Alan F. DeForest, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold F. DeForest of 126 Arnold Drive, Kingston, recently received his BS degree in business administration from Norwich University, Northfield, Vt. DeForest's first student in his senior year, he was known throughout New England as an outstanding rugby player.

Lyanne R. Davis and Walter F. Wagor, both of Saugerties, were among 230 graduates of Houghton College, Houghton, recently. Miss Davis is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Davis of 65 Apple Tree Drive. She graduated summa cum laude with a BA degree in mathematics and elementary education. Wagor is the son of Charles Wagor of Box 7112. He graduated cum laude with a BA degree majoring in psychology.

Dolores M. Hodge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Hodge of 21 Franklin Street, Kingston, graduated recently with honors from Dickinson University in Pennsylvania. She received a BA degree in liberal arts with a major in French. She spent her junior year of college abroad and has recently been accepted in the Peace Corps with assignment to the Ivory Coast, West Africa.

Roxanne Young, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard W. Young, Route 3, Kingston, is a graduate of St. Lawrence University, Canton, where she received a BA degree with a major in English.

Mark Q. Slicker of Kingston, was one of 525 recent graduates from George College, Milledgeville, Ga., and Martin Van Vleet of Milton and George Michael of Old Post Road, Red Hook, are graduates of Fairleigh Dickinson University in New Jersey.

Thirteen area students have graduated from State University Agricultural and Technical College, Delhi. They include Dale C. Brainer, Kingston and Kathleen Reinhard of Saugerties, associate degrees in the agricultural division; Kevin Jones of Kingston, business management; Edwin J. Jasinski of High Falls, engineering; John D. Gallo, Jeffery P. Hamsher, and John B. O'live, all of Kingston, hotel, restaurant and food service; Linda J. Martin, Ulster Park, parks and recreation program; Mark E. Kerr, Saugerties, carpentry; William J. Schoonmaker, Kingston, electrical construction and maintenance; Donald T. Beesmer, and John S. Streakers, Gurus All Part of Day's Work for Lady Counsul

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Mrs. Carson, we have an America girl streaking through the hotel corridors. Can you come and help?

The manager of Delhi's luxury Ashoka hotel was a nervous wreck, but for Virginia (Ginny) Shelton Carson, U.S. consul in New Delhi, the call was just part of a normal working day.

Mrs. Carson, 48, is a widow who yearned for adventure. She got it in the foreign service.

"Since I got here I've been in jails, hospitals, mental institutions and Hari Krishna temples visiting Americans in trouble," she said. "Next week

I have to go north to identify the skull of a missing American."

When Mrs. Carson reached the hotel, she found the streaker beary-eyed and incoherent. She called a doctor, who diagnosed the case as drug misuse. Mrs. Carson later arranged for the girl's return to the United States.

"Most of my time is spent processing visas for Indians who want to visit the United States," she said, but added what she liked best in her work was dealing with the "welfare and protection of American citizens abroad," as the job is called officially.

She said the biggest headache she has with young, upper middle class Americans who come East, fall in love with India, overstay their visas, and then end up either in jail, sick or destitute.

Eric Cameron Smith of Studio City, Calif., who camped for 23 days last March in the transit lounge of Delhi Airport because he longed to return to his cave on the Ganges River to meditate, was one of Mrs. Carson's more celebrated cases.

Granting visas to Indians going to the United States is another kind of problem.

"When I'm processing visas, I don't like to hassle anyone who has a real reason to go to the United States," she said. "But they have to establish that they have a reason to come back to India again."

The problem, she said, is that many Indians apply for tourist visas while planning to enroll in a school, get married, or find a job. Then they try to get immigrant status.

"It is much quicker to adjust status in the United States than to apply for an immigration visa here," she said. "When I first came, I was very softhearted and trusting, but nothing puts starch in my spine more than getting notices of adjusted status. Realizing you've been lied to makes you a lot more skeptical."

Some bluffers are easy to weed out.

"Once a carpenter who earned $26 a month came to see me and said, 'Sir, (everybody calls me Sir) Sir, I want to go to America on vacation to visit my cousin brother,'" Mrs. Carson said. "It was fairly logical for me to assume that he would not be coming back."

Her favorite visa applicant was a man who listed his occupation as "saint" on the application form.

"He wanted to go as the personal guru of a $50,000-a-year dentist in Los Angeles," she said. "How could you say no to a saint? Anyway we sure don't have an overflow of saints in the States."

Mrs. Carson often is assigned by Washington immigration officials to check the life histories of prospective immigrants.

"Right now there are chicken tandoori restaurants springing up all over America," she said. "Since there is a real shortage of American chicken tandoori cooks, that is a legitimate immigrant profession."

"Checking their claims of past experience takes me to isolated villages and really hole-in-the-wall restaurants. I love the work, because it gives me a chance to explore India."

Her experience with the foreign service began when she married career diplomat James Carson in her hometown, Forest Grove, Ore.

For 17 years the couple toured the world with such diverse posts as Germany, the Ivory Coast, Dahomey, and Upper Volta.

Then, on Nov. 22, 1972, Carson died of post-surgical complications after an emergency operation for a bleeding ulcer.

Carson's pension and life insurance would have stretched to put their three children—Tom, 18, a Princeton University student; Wendy, 21, a language major at William Mary College, and Nancy, 10—through college.

She said she swayed when first approached by the State Department, but:

"Finally I figured I had another adventure left to me, but it had to be in another part of the world."

She took a consular course in Washington and studied Hindi for four months. By July, 1974 she was settled in New Delhi as junior consul.

"She has impressed everyone in the embassy with her spunk and intelligence," an admiring colleague said. "None of us will be surprised if one day we're calling her ambassador."

Congress, Trade Laws; An Interesting Letter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress appears on the verge of abolishing fair trade laws, a move that will result in either millions of dollars in consumer savings or runaway monopolies, depending on which side you believe.

The situation produced this letter from a reader in Chippewa Falls, Wis.:

"I have a question that is perplexing me. I have been reading of efforts to do away with fair trade laws, which would abolish manufacturers' ability to set the retail price of a product, and eventually this would benefit the consumer with lower prices for some products in some areas.

"But I also read about the manufacturers putting the lines on cans, etc. so that a computer checkout reads the prices and automatically rings up the consumer's bill.

"Since the manufacturer prints the labels, and since I don't see how the retailer can change the labels, doesn't this actually circumvent any efforts to abolish fair trade laws? I would appreciate any comment you would have on this."

The two things really have nothing to do with one another. All the line code on a label does is identify the specific product. The retailer then adjusts his individual in-store computer to ring up whatever price he wants whenever that code is read by the computer at the checkout stand.

If a grocer wants to charge 59 cents for a can of corn, for example, he simply programs the computer to ring up 59 cents every time the code for that particular size and brand of corn passes the checkout stand scanner.

If next weekshe wants to raise the price to 69 cents, he simply re-programs the computer.

In any case, the change in fair trade laws is not likely to have a great impact on groceries, which are the main retailers involved in the coming boom in computer checkouts.

Legislation to end fair trade laws in the 34 states which still have them is pending in both the House and the Senate. The Marketing Policy Institute, which represents the manufacturers of fair trade items, calls the outlook dark for its constituents. It claims the abolition would be anticonsumer because small stores would be driven out of business, especially in the appliance industry, by big firms which can wage price wars.

President Ford claims the move would save consumers $2.1 billion a year in lower prices; Senate backers of the move say no one really can calculate the savings but it might be from $1.5 to $2.1 billion.

From Coquille, Ore.:

"I am looking for a set of cookware by the brand name 'Vita Craft.' They are three-ply stainless steel with a copper core. I have looked in my locality with no luck. They cook, clean, look and stay beautiful."

Vita Craft Corp. has headquarters in Shawnee, Kan. They tell us their products are not sold in Oregon but they do a mail order business, including handles or other spare parts. Write them at Vita Craft Corp., Customer Service Department, 11122 West 58th st., Shawnee, Kan. 66204.

And a similar request from Arp, Tex.:

"Is there still a cooking ware company called 'Steelco' stainless steel? This was in operation in the '40s. My steel is still good, but I need handles, etc.

"Also, where would I order Club Aluminum handles and lids (glass and aluminum)?" The Club items can be obtained by writing to the company, Club Products Co., 9205 Detroit Ave., Cleveland, Ohio 44102, attention director of consumer services.

Steelco went out of business a few years back, we are told. However, we do have an address in Chicago which might be of help: 4450 Ravenswood Ave., Chicago, Ill. One member of the industry told us he thought that address still was supplying parts. They are not listed in the telephone directory, however.

Sirhan Has Been Model Prisoner

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (UPI) — Sirhan B. Sirhan, once condemned to die for the assassination of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, has been a "model prisoner" and if he keeps it up he will be released in 1986 under a new California parole policy.

The state Adult Authority determined recently that Sirhan should be released after serving a total of 16 years and nine months for the first-degree murder of Kennedy, the 1968 California Democratic nominee for president.

The parole board acted under a new policy of the administration of Democratic Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. to establish specific release dates for all California inmates who now serve "indeterminate" sentences.

Sirhan, 31, attended the parole board hearing at San Quentin Prison, where he is held in a cell in the facility's maximum security bloc.

A prison spokesman described the wily Palestinian Arab as a model prisoner who will be paroled on Feb. 23, 1986; provided he obeys behavior rules and commits no "serious offenses."

Sirhan's attorney, Godfrey Isaac of Beverly Hills, Calif., said he talked with Sirhan after the board hearing and Sirhan indicated he would fear for his life after he is freed.

"I'm concerned for his life," Isaac said. "I've have talked with Sirhan and he was also concerned for his life when he previously had not been."

George Stitzel of Los Angeles, one of the jurors at Sirhan's murder trial, voiced amazement at the board's action, declaring: "If he gets out, he could do it again."

But Philip D. Guthrie, assistant director of the Department of Corrections, termed Sirhan "extremely well behaved all the time he has been in prison — absolutely no problem."

Guthrie said the parole board "considered that while he killed a very well known figure, they had to treat him as if he killed an ordinary person."

Sirhan was sent to prison nearly six years ago for the June 5, 1968, slaying of Kennedy moments after the New York Democrat claimed victory in the California primary election over Sen. Eugene McCarthy of Minnesota.

Sirhan was sentenced to die in the gas chamber, but the state Supreme Court struck down the death penalty in 1972 as unconstitutional. Sirhan and 106 other death row convicts were spared, although capital punishment was later ordered restored by the voters.

When his execution was directed by the Los Angeles jury in 1969, Sirhan chewed on a wad of gum and said, "Even Jesus Christ could not have saved me."

Granting of a parole date is part of a new policy of Brown's administration to set "determinate" sentence dates as soon as possible for California convicts.

Guthrie noted that a person convicted of murder in California can be paroled after serving as little as seven years, and said the 16-year, nine-month term for Sirhan was at the top of the "range" for convicted murderers.

Under the new policy, the behavior of a convict is periodically reviewed to determine whether the release date should be changed.

During his 3½ month trial, Sirhan testified that he could not remember shooting Kennedy. He said he went into a "trance" just before the shooting and remembered nothing until after the shots were fired.

Investigators found newspaper clippings Sirhan had collected related to the sale by the United States of Phantom jet fighter planes to Israel. Kennedy said during the campaign he favored sending the aircraft to Israel.

The parole announcement followed by five months the filing of a petition with the California Supreme Court by Isaac to reopen the assassination investigation on the grounds of a "second gun" theory.

Isaac, currently Sirhan's lawyer, contended that a second gun was fired by a hotel security guard and one of the bullets may have struck Kennedy.

Reacting to the parole board's action Tuesday, Isaac said "I hope those interested (in proving Sirhan's innocence) will not set aside their efforts" now that a parole date is set.

The shooting incident, recorded on television film and by still cameras, occurred in a pantry just off the main ballroom floor where Kennedy moments before thanked the crowd for the California nomination.

Kennedy, surrounded by aides and well-wishers, walked through a set of swinging doors into the pantry filled with hotel workers and was standing next to a dishwasher when a reported eight shots were fired. He died 25 hours later at a hospital.

MRS. MOWELL WITH DAUGHTER, JANE HULING

By Lynn Mulvaney

POUGHKEEPSIE
Two years ago, when a 99-year-old blind, Kingston woman had a successful cataract operation enabling her to see again after 10 years of darkness, the story made headlines.

Today, 101-year-old Mrs. Gertrude Mowell of Dutch Village, is alive and well and recuperating from another cataract operation performed on the other eye last Tuesday at St. Francis Hospital in Poughkeepsie.

The hero of the hour, just as he was two years ago is Dr. Donald L. Praeger of 'God Has Been Good to Me'...

Poughkeepsie, who dared to perform the surgery on a person most people would consider too old to withstand the ordeal.

Mrs. Mowell's daughter, Mrs. Jane Huling, with whom she resides, said the decision to operate was easy to make once Dr. Praeger indicated it was justified. Cataract surgery should not be denied at any age, he has said.

"I'm glad it is all over and that I have gotten rid of my last cataract," Mrs. Mowell said Thursday, a few hours after she returned home in a car. Refusing the use of a wheelchair, she climbed two eight-step flights of stairs to their lovely apartment.

"God has been good to me, the operation," she said, "I don't even feel as though I have been through an operation." Born in Wallkill in 1874, Mrs. Mowell is a religious woman who worked for hospitals and the church for many years in the Wallkill-Gardiner area. When Dr. Praeger first removed the bandages from Mrs. Mowell's eyes and she saw again after ten years, she called it a miracle.

AREA NEWS TODAY

City Project Plans Confirmed

ALBANY State Commissioner of Transportation Raymond T. Schuler has confirmed plans for three major construction projects in Kingston:

• Bids will be opened July 10 on the reconstruction and repaving of Albany Avenue from Col. Chandler Drive to Foxhall Avenue.

• Construction on the Kingston North-South Arterial is tentatively set to begin in May of 1977, assuming federal environmental impact statements are completed.

• Work "should be underway shortly" on the Flatbush Avenue railroad crossing. Agreements have been reached with Penn Central for improvements to TenBroeck Avenue and Foxhall Avenue crossings.

Schuler, in a letter to Mayor Francis R. Koenig, said that the July 10 bid date on the Albany Avenue work would allow the Department of Transportation to proceed on the project in September for possible completion before winter sets in.

"We will encourage the successful bidder to work at both ends of the project simultaneously in the hope that the portion from the Col. Chandler Drive to Foxhall Avenue might be completed before winter sets in," Schuler wrote Koenig. The other half of the project improves Albany Avenue from the railroad overpass near Grossman's to Foxhall Avenue.

Schuler commended Koenig and the Common Council for their prompt action in producing city approvals for the project. "Due to the interest and cooperation of Mayor Koenig and Council in carrying out the various actions required of the city to implement this project, we will be able to proceed on this accelerated schedule for the Albany Avenue improvement," Schuler said.

Schuler also advised Koenig that bluestone curbing, which Koenig had requested on Albany Avenue, would be used. "This would preserve the character of Albany Avenue," he said.

Schuler also informed Koenig that he had signed the Kingston Urban Renewal Agency's statement for Kingston Arterial support in their request for federal aid funds.

"That statement indicated we would begin construction in May of 1977," Schuler wrote Koenig. "You and I both know that we have an excellent chance of getting started before that. It is all going to depend upon how fast we can get the bureaucrats in Washington to approve the Environmental Impact Statement and how soon we are able to purchase the right of way after that approval. You see, we cannot commence buying right of way until we obtain the EIS approval," he said.

Schuler wrote Koenig that in his opinion, the railroad crossing situation was "well in hand."

"All of this work should go a long way towards remedying a condition that has come to be a disgrace," Schuler said.

Schuler closed by thanking Koenig "for your great cooperation."

In an unrelated story from the DOT Commissioner's office, Schuler announced that he has rejected a request by Greyhound Lines Inc. to boost fares in New York State by 10 percent.

He has directed DOT experts to conduct a field investigation of the company's revenue needs (at Greyhound's expense) and has ordered a formal proceeding with public hearings (to be announced).

Mental Health Center: Approval Still Lacking

KINGSTON State approval of the proposed Ulster County Mental Health Center has not been received and is contingent on whether funds for it are included in the state's supplemental budget.

Local officials are contacting Ulster County's representatives in the state legislature today in an effort to obtain information on the status of the budget in view of the "critical need" for a mental health day care program here.

Recognizing that need and acknowledging that it will be at least a couple of years before a new center can be constructed and opened after state approval, the local legislature's public health committee and building committee met recently to discuss a number of interim proposals.

Consideration has been given to renovating the third floor of the Tumor Clinic Building near Kingston Hospital but Ulster County Building Superintendent Kenneth J. Whispell reported that it would cost $50,000 to $75,000 which he and committee members felt was too high a price tag for temporary quarters.

Another proposal to use the entire Tumor Clinic Building as a mental health center, in view of the fact that the clinic was to be discontinued, was also under consideration. But, it has been learned from Dr. Edmund Reppert that the tumor clinic operation is going to be reestablished and that the entire building would not be available.

Meanwhile, it was reported that Kingston Hospital Administrator Anthony Triulzi has made an offer of the use of the hospital's large nurse's residence for a temporary mental health center. According to County Legislator Louis H. Bevier (R-Dist. 8), chairman of the Public Health Committee, Triulzi offered the nurse's residence for the cost of electricity and heat.

But, the two committees felt that they would need a more definitive offer from the Kingston Hospital Board of Trustees before considering investment of funds for renovations. They would want a firm proposal as to how many years it would be possible to lease the building before considering it as a site for temporary or permanent quarters for the center.

A site for the new Mental Health Center, for which the county has hired an architect, remains an open question with a number of locations under review.

Benedictine Hospital which originally offered the county property on its Mary's Avenue site on which to build the center, has asked that the county decide within 30 to 60 days whether or not it plans to build the facility there or officially abandon the idea.

There has also been mixed reaction to a proposal to locate the new center on the county's Golden Hill complex. Those favoring the idea point out that four buildings are now located there, that water and property are available and that they feel that centralizing new county buildings would be advantageous.

Area Police Beat Armed Robberies in Dutchess

By Matt Spireng

POUGHKEEPSIE

Two armed robberies which occurred about an hour apart Tuesday night in the Poughkeepsie City and Town Police.

At about 10:50 p.m. two black males in their early 20's entered the Pizza Time restaurant at 28 Raymond Avenue. Brandishing what was believed to be a .38 caliber revolver, the pair "relieved the proprietor" of some $200 in cash, town police said.

One of the robbers had braided hair and wore a tee shirt, police said. The second had an afro hair style and was tall and thin.

At about 11:55 p.m. three black males entered the Orchard Inn on Orchard Place and confronted the owner, Rose Graziano, with a large knife, city police said. Ordering Mrs. Graziano against the wall, the trio made off with some $70 to $80 from the cash register.

Police said one of the robbers was described as being about nine years old. The other two were about 19.

Meanwhile, in other area police matters: Poughkeepsie Town Police arrested three young Poughkeepsie residents on multiple charges after they allegedly broke into the Holy Trinity School on Main Street.

Joseph Powers, 19, Richard West, 22, and Irvin Arnold, 20, were each charged with second degree burglary and second degree conspiracy.

West was additionally charged with third degree possession of a weapon (a handgun, police said) and second degree possession of stolen property. Powers was additionally charged with third degree criminal possession of stolen property. Following arraignment, the three were jailed in lieu of $10,000 bail each.

An intensive investigation by state police BCI investigators continued today in the homicide of Mrs. Hazel Marshall, 61, of Millerton, whose badly beaten body was found early Sunday in a parking area off Route 9W in the Town of Marlborough. Investigators reported no progress today in the murder probe.

A young Port Ewen woman who allegedly claimed that her residence had been burglarized by three men and a juvenile wound up in jail herself on a charge of falsely reporting an incident.

Ulster County Sheriff's Department detectives charged Jane Atkins, 17, of Hudson View Cabins following an investigation Tuesday night and early today. According to detectives, the woman made a sworn deposition before Esopus Town Justice Robert Jordan which resulted in arrest warrants being issued for three men she had identified.

Investigation revealed, however, that one of the men had permission and a key to enter the woman's residence, detectives said. She was jailed in lieu of $1,000 bail.

Woodstock constables reported the arrest of Dwain Storie, 33, of West Hurley Tuesday night on charges of disorderly conduct and unlawful possession of a dangerous instrument.

According to police, Storie allegedly swung a broken baseball bat at a woman (who was not identified) during a softball game at the town recreation field Tuesday night.

Storie was jailed in lieu of $150 bail.

Solid Foundation for City Pool

Workman for Paddock Pools Inc. of Albany gets down to basics as excavation for new city swimming pool at Andretta Park (off Dietz Stadium) near completion. The June 15 contract date for completion of Phase I is "probably out," according to city officials but they expect work to be completed shortly thereafter. Final specifications for Phase II—the bathhouse and supporting facilities—will be forwarded for state approval within the next week. (Freeman photo).

May Take Licenses of Doctors Who Strike

ALBANY (UPI) — In what may signal a toughening stand by legislators, a bill has been proposed countering a threatened strike by doctors with a law revoking or suspending the license of any physician who refuses to practice.

Assemblyman Thomas J. Culhane, (D-Bronx) Tuesday proposed legislation aimed at physicians because of "what I consider an almost avaricious and intransigent position by the doctors" on medical malpractice insurance.

During the Memorial Day weekend, angry doctors disrupted the usually staid and proper meeting of the State Medical Society. Although the group traditionally has no room for rebels, members of the House of Delegates cast aside the recommendation of its leaders and disapproved legislation adopted by the legislature.

State officials now are faced with a possible phasing out of doctor services beginning next week because of what doctors say are "inadequate" malpractice regulations.

Sen. Tarky J. Lombardi, head of the Senate Health Committee and instrumental in the negotiations that led to the measure finally passed by the legislature, ruled out chances of additional changes in the malpractice law.

"It will be impossible to get anything through again this year," the Syracuse Republican said, noting that Culhane's tough approach picked up strong backing in the Assembly.

"We will have a commission to oversee the malpractice situation, as we said we would, but there is no way the legislature will pass another change in the law," Lombardi said.

Gov. Hugh L. Carey and the leaders of the legislature have repeatedly said they will set up a "vehicle" to monitor the malpractice situation, but the gesture carried little weight with the physicians.

Culhane said his bill would "revoke the license of any medical doctor who arbitrarily, willfully, or maliciously, refuses to treat a patient or practice his medical specialty."

Culhane added that he would also ask members of the state's congressional delegation to propose federal changes that would make a New York suspension recognized in other states. Such a bill would be aimed at doctors who threaten to move.

Physicians have indicated that some services will begin being phased out next Sunday and that all services, except in emergency cases, may be withheld after July 1.

The governor and legislative leaders were reportedly upset that the physicians refused to give the new law, which goes into effect July 1, a chance to function.

Carey said in a statement that he had hoped the doctors would wait for the law to be implemented so it would be possible for "the proper authorities to monitor its impact and see how it compares with the old law, which was really no system at all."

State officials had labored at length to come up with the legislation passed earlier this month in hopes of averting the type of medical crisis which developed in California, where a doctors' strike is now in its fourth week.

The issue came to a head in New York when the Argonaut Insurance Co. announced it was withdrawing its malpractice policies as of July 1. The California-based firm decided to pull out after the State Insurance Department refused to okay rate increases of as much as 300 percent.

Armed For Town of Esopus Assessment Review

Esopus Assessor Stirling Potter has announced that data collectors will be taking a complete inventory of all property in the town for his office. Quarter Century of Service

Mrs. Anne Marie Gibbons of Hurley was honored recently by her fellow employees of Rondout National Bank on the occasion of her having celebrated 25 years of service with the Kingston bank. She is shown with bank president James Dwyer at Judies Restaurant where the dinner was held. (Freeman photo)

Rondout Savings Flower Show

The third annual flower show sponsored by the Rondout Savings Bank will be held Thursday and Friday, May 29 and 30, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Mrs. George Brown (L), an exhibitor, is shown preparing an arrangement as Mrs. Jack Lupton, vice president of the Little Gardens Club of Kingston, and James E. Norton, president of the bank, look on. This year's theme will be "World Banking."

U.S. Policy Is Questioned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Multinational corporations have been forced to make secret payments to foreign government officials because of a vacuum in U.S. policy, according to Gulf Oil Chairman Bob R. Dorsey.

"It goes back to my lifetime experience of getting very little aid from the government," said Dorsey.

Dorsey said all U.S. corporations with dealings in other countries are faced with the problem of extortion on a regular basis. Sometimes the company is strong enough to resist the pressures. At other times the only recourse is to yield reluctantly to demands for payments of corporate funds.

When a corporation makes its initial investment in an underdeveloped country — often with U.S. encouragement — the ability to withstand pressures is relatively easy. But as the size of the investment grows over the years, he said, the company is placed in a position where it cannot bargain effectively without serious economic consequences.

Dorsey said he has "played both games" — resisted demands for illegal payments to government officials and made the payments. In the past decade, Dorsey said, Gulf has paid $5 million in Bolivia, Italy, Lebanon and South Korea to protect hundreds of millions of dollars in corporate investments.

Dorsey's comments, in a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee investigation of Gulf, were the first made publicly on the reasoning behind such corporate payments. Later hearings will delve into the internal affairs of the Northrop aerospace company, the United Brands fruit company and possibly Ashland Oil and Phillips Petroleum, which have acknowledged making nearly $40 million in secret payments to foreign officials.

"Basically, these things only happen where there is major political instability," mumbled Dorsey while toying with a silver pen during the recent hearings.

He said a company often is threatened with the loss of its investments. For example, he pointed out, several countries have announced plans to take over Gulf assets as a result of payments extorted from the corporation by Bolivia's late president Rene Barrientos and the political party of South Korean President Park Chung Hee.

Subcommittee Chairman Frank Church, D-Idaho, and Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., asked whether the local U.S. embassy or the State Department ever had aided corporations facing extortion demands.

"Basically, they (multinational corporations) are on their own. And as far as the U.S. government is concerned, we're like a motherless child," Dorsey answered.

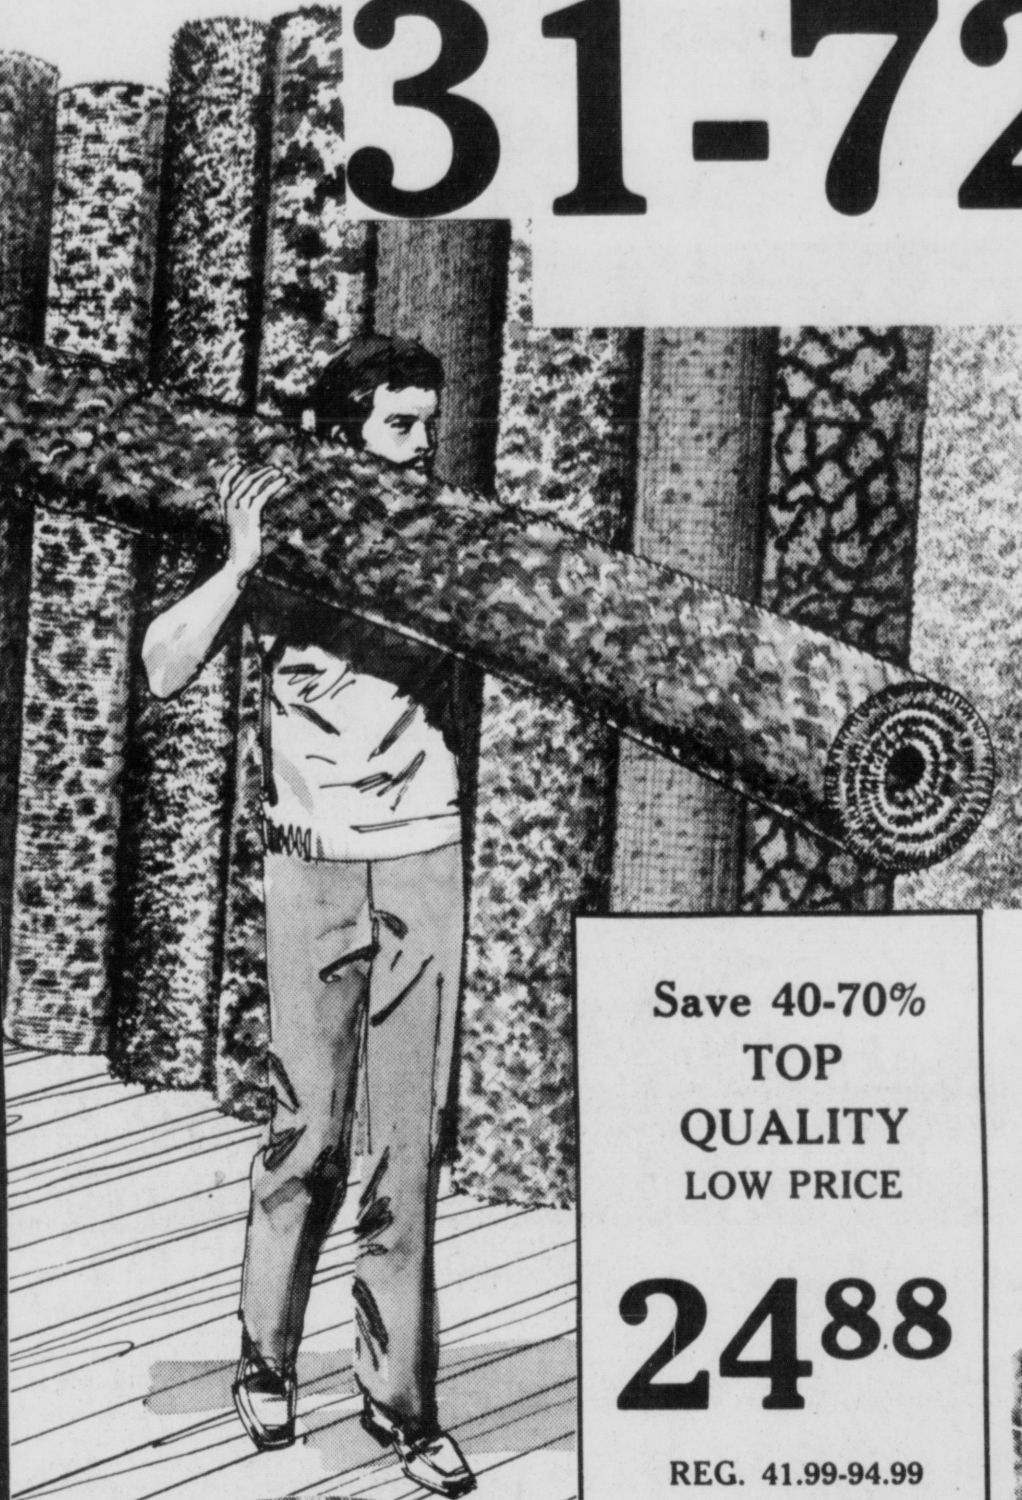

Dorsey said he never had spoken to State Department and embassy personnel because he had no reason to expect either sympathy or help.

Buyers, Lenders Talking the Same

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Prospective homebuyers and mortgage lending institutions will be talking the same language beginning June 20 when the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act goes into effect.

How many potential homebuyers will benefit?

"Almost everyone buying a home will," according to Roger B. Hawkins, director of the American Bankers' Association Housing and Real Estate Finance Division.

"The act covers virtually all mortgage loans made in this country in regard to one- to four-family residential property," Hawkins stated, "and that includes condominium units."

"A disclosure - settlement statement gives the prospective homebuyer the information necessary to shop and compare for financing, and it also provides advance disclosure of all settlement costs and who is to pay them."

The act also requires (if the house was completed more than 12 months prior to the settlement) that the lending institution confirm that the seller or his agent has disclosed in writing:

- The name and address of the present owner.
- The date the property was acquired by the present owner.
- If the seller has not owned the property for at least two years prior to the date of the loan application and has not used the property as a place of residence, the date and purchase price of the last "arm's length transfer" of the property, a list of subsequent improvements, other than maintenance, and the cost of the improvements.

The purpose of this requirement, according to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development is to inform consumers whether the house is being sold by an owner-occupant or by someone who acquired the house and prepared it for resale.

"Many investors," stated HUD, "make a livelihood by investing in existing housing, making repairs and improvements and reselling at a fair profit."

"However, abuses have occurred in which only superficial repairs have been made, and homes have been sold at prices greatly in excess of their value."

Every mortgage loan applicant will receive from his or her bank, savings and loan institution, mutual savings bank or other lender, a free booklet, "Settlement Costs and You" and a three-page form, "Disclosure-Settlement Statement."

Both the booklet and the form were prepared by HUD and the Federal Reserve Board to inform the public about the appropriate procedures in gaining mortgage financing and about the charges for settlement services.

To assist the nation's nearly 14,000 banks in complying with the new consumer law, ABA has prepared the industry's first "how to" kit.

In addition to including a reprint of the HUD booklet and settlement forms, the kit contains the regulations, instructional materials which explain the settlement forms step-by-step and a copy of the act itself, known as RESPA.

More than 13,000 ABA kits were sent free to member banks to help them meet the June 20 deadline. Banks and other mortgage lenders such as savings and loan institutions, mortgage bankers and insurance companies, can then place bulk orders with the ABA for the consumer booklets and the special settlement form which include a federal truth-in-lending statement.

Man Who Talks With Horses Teaches Others the Language

LONDON (UPI) — Henry Blake takes so much pleasure in talking with horses that he's trying to teach everyone to do it.

Blake is a real-life Dr. Doolittle who chats with horses as easily as he talks to another person. He's just written a book to teach horse language to others.

"There's nothing mysterious about it," Blake said, eyeing a passing pony outside a riding stable near Hyde Park.

"Communicating with horses is quite simple, and there's nothing superhuman about it."

But there is something eerie about watching Blake with a horse. He is a wiry, jockeysized outdoorsman of 49, and when he concentrates on a horse something almost tangible passes between them.

Blake, visiting the London stable from his farm in north Wales, broke off an interview in mid-sentence as a small brown mare walked up.

Blake looked hard at the horse. He blew softly into the mare's right nostril, the equine way of saying a friendly hello. Gently the horse nibbled his hand.

"We're on the same wavelength at once, she and I," Blake said. He had never seen the horse before. For about three minutes they chatted—there is no other word—without making a sound.

"We're just exchanging messages of friendship, reassurance, general understanding," Blake said. "I wish I could make you see how ordinary this is."

Ordinary or not, Blake's Souvenir Press book, "Talking With Horses," propounds the theory that telepathy and ex-trasensory perception are major parts of horse language. He knows this is highly controversial, though he cannot see why.

"People have been using ESP to control horses for 5,000 years," he said. "They don't think about it, so they aren't consciously aware of it."

"But my wife and I have been studying horse language for 20 years, and we are absolutely convinced that ESP does exist." His book details repeated experiments to prove that horses can communicate without seeing or hearing each other.

Only a small part of horse language uses sounds. Blake has sorted out these sounds, and a horse's meaningful gestures and compiled a remarkable "English-Horse dictionary."

"In it," he writes, "we have taken each of the 47 phrases used by the horse, together with 54 submessages, and we have noted the various ways in which most horses will convey each meaning."

This gets complicated. A horse has 26 different ways of saying "I love you," Blake said, and some phrases have up to 30 variations.

"This fellow won't say anything at all," Blake said, gesturing at a towering black stallion named Commodore. "I can't even get him to say 'hello.' He's just telling me to get lost."

It is rare that Blake can't make a horse do what he wants.

"I am a true centaur, half man, half horse," he writes. "Maybe I am not quite sane, but horses have been my whole life."

He discovered his affinity for them before he could walk. For 30 years he has trained horses others found unmanageable and tamed wild ones from the Welsh mountains.

Now he takes only the toughest cases, for the challenge. He has given up farming and runs riding holidays with the 15 horses he keeps. One of them nearly became the only horse he couldn't tame.

"A pony named Spitfire, appropriately enough," he said. "She'd been beaten and mistreated for eight years until she simply hated humans. She wasn't far off getting to the end of me."

Blake even got around Commodore before long. After 10 minutes with the uncommunicative stallion he was vigorously scratching Commodore's mane—"horses nibble another's mane to show friendship," he said. In a few moments Commodore was telling him just where to scratch. "People are doing this all over the world," Blake said. "Some do it with dogs. I happen to have made a special study of horses, so I do it with horses."

"What I hope my book does is help people extend the knowledge they already have, and widen the communication they have with their horses."

The Incredible Clock of Lier

LIER, Belgium (UPI) — The incredible Centenary Clock of Lier, as author Charles Graves once observed, can do everything except drink your beer for you.

It may not be the most beautiful clock in Europe, but it is certainly one of the most complex. Not only does it measure such mundane movements as time, tide and rotation of the earth, but also it charts the courses of the planets around the sun, records the phases of the moon and predicts solar and lunar eclipses.

Moreover, it can tell you all you want to know about such astronomical exotica as the solar cycle, the Dominical Letter, the Golden Number and the Epact.

And it has a brother clock in this tiny Flemish town near Antwerp which, unlike the Centenary Clock, is not firmly ensconced in a 14th Century tower and is therefore more portable. This clock, even more elaborate than its celebrated brother, is aptly called the Wonder Clock and was on display at the New York World's Fair in 1939.

The Centenary Clock has 70 dials in all, 13 on the outside and 57 on the inside. In its tower is a working model of the solar system in which the earth takes 365 1/4 days to orbit the sun and Pluto orbits in 248.8 years. Slowpoke Pluto has moved only about 45 centimeters (17 3/4 inches) since the clock was first installed in 1930.

The Wonder Clock boasts 93 dials and 14 little robots, including:

Four figures representing the ages of man (childhood, adolescence, adulthood and old age) who toll the passage of the hours;

Nine comely maidens who jump up and down perched on tiny planets in a lively display designed to show the relative effects of gravity on the different planets of the solar system;

A self-conscious young man who periodically turns and checks his weight on a set of scales—he loses and gains according to which planet he is supposed to be standing on, which happens to correspond to whichever planet-mermaid is jumping up and down at the moment.

In fact, the Americans apparently liked the Wonder Clock so much that although the 1939 World's Fair ended Oct. 21, 1940, they didn't give the clock back to the Belgians until 1956, 18 years after it had been lent to them.

In each clock, all of the works are run by a mother clock which uses a single pendulum.

Both are the creation of Belgian royal clockmaker Louis Zimmer, who died in 1970. It took Zimmer five years to complete the Centenary Clock, which he built with his own money in his spare time and presented to his hometown to mark 100 years of Belgian independence. And even as the industrious clockmaker was working on that clock, he began the Wonder Clock, which was completed in 1935.

It would be impossible to list all of the extraordinary talents of the two clocks, but here is a sampler:

In the world time sections of both the Centenary and Wonder clocks, there is a Chinese timepiece in which the hands move backwards (counterclockwise) past Chinese characters instead of the usual Arabic numerals.

The dials which record the days of the month always move correctly and without adjustment to the first day of the month, regardless of whether a month has 28, 29, 30 or 31 days.

In the section marking the cycle of solar and lunar eclipses it takes 18 years for a small piece of metal to move around the circumference of a circular foot.

Despite his herculean efforts to chart the passage of the seconds, hours, days, weeks, months, years and eons, Zimmer remained quite philosophical about it all.

"Time," he once said, "is a human invention, and we are victims of our own invention."

CDR. R. J. LANNING, USN

Assumes Command

ALBANY
Commander Richard J. Lanning is scheduled to assume command of the Navy Recruiting District in Albany during a May 30 ceremony. He will be relieving Commander Donald J. Florio, who has received orders to the Naval Air Station, Bermuda.

Recently commanding officer of Navy Patrol Squadron Ten, Lanning is a Brooklyn, N.Y. native who began his Naval career in 1955.

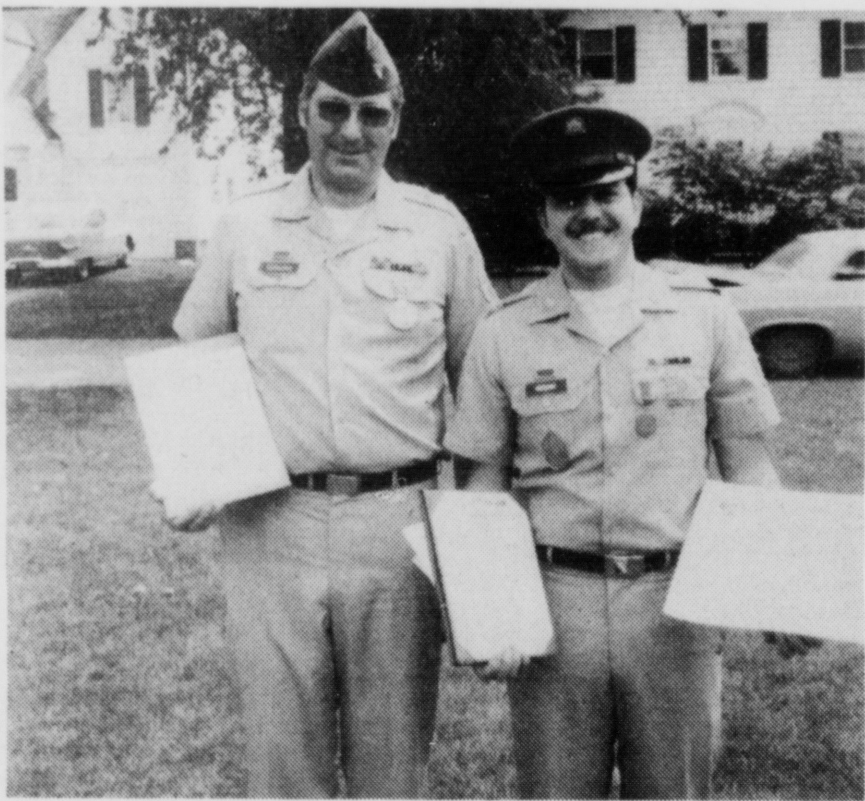

The Navy Recruiting District in Albany consists of more than 60 stations located in Northeastern New York, Northwestern Vermont, Western Massachusetts and all of Connecticut.

Summer Recess

KINGSTON
Veterans studying under the GI Bill can take a summer from school without losing any of their entitlement when they return to school in the fall, according to Frank Votto, director New York State Division of Veterans' Affairs.

Veterans who plan to return to the same school and pursue the same course in the fall need not apply for a ew certificate of eligibility. The VA allowance is not affected by summer earnings, said Votto. And the veterans should keep in mind that eligibility for the allowance paid under the GI Bill ceases ten years from the date of discharge, or by May 31, 1976, whichever is later. State veteran counselor for this area is Donald G. Moore, 300 Flatbush Avenue, Kingston.

Local Guardsmen Honored

SSG William J. Ferguson (L) and SSG Lawrence Sicheri, both of Service Battery, 1st Battalion, 156 Field Artillery, Kingston, were honored at recent ceremonies at the North Manor Avenue Armory. SSG Ferguson received his second New York State Military Commendation medal, issued for his efforts in recruiting. SSG Sicheri also was awarded a State Military Commendation medal for being an honor graduate of the Redeye Missile System Contoller Course at Ft. Bliss, Texas. The awards were presented by Major George E. Holbrook, Battalion Executive Officer, and CW2 William A. Steuding, Battalion Personnel Technician.

SCENE OF BLOOD DONATION

Redemptorist Fathers Enroll

ESOPUS
More than 90 new members from the Mount St. Alphonsus Redemptorist Fathers recently enrolled in the Ulster County Blood Bank.

A mass blood drawing took place shortly after enrollment at the school for the convenience of donors, according to Arthur C. Chipp, blood bank president, who noted that the drawing "Will cover any blood requirements for one year, according to the group plan."

Mount St. Alphonsus Redemptorist Fathers, under the direction of its superior, Father James Kerins, is the graduate school for Missionary and parish work throughout the United States, Brazil, Paraguay, the Virgin Islands, the Dominican Republic and Thailand.

Noting that the contributions supply blood for the Kingston, Benedictine and Ellenville Community Hospitals, through the Kingston City Laboratory, Chipp called it "one more example of growing participation by many diverse groups, clubs, unions, volunteer firemen and various firms throughout the county."

Groups interested in arranging a presentation for membership are asked to call 339-5525. The Ulster County Blood Bank is a member of the United Way of Ulster County.

Campers Reminded On Pet Care

ALBANY
The Office of Parks and Recreation reminds campers and state park visitors that dogs and horses entering parks or recreation areas must comply with minimal health requirements.

Dogs four months of age and older must be vaccinated against rabies and identified by tag and certificate. Vaccination must be within 36 months if modified live virus vaccine was used or 12 months if killed rabies virus vaccine was used.

Horses must be accompanied by a negative test certificate for equine infectious anemia, the test having been made during the current or preceding calendar year.

The certificate attesting to compliance with the requirements must be shown on entering a park, campsite or recreation area where dogs or horses are permitted.

Kiwanis Club Circus Committee Is Named

KINGSTON
Peter Mathews, president of the Kingston Kiwanis Club, has named a 13-member committee to plan for the July 24 appearance of the Clyde Beatty-Cole Brothers Circus in Kingston.

The committee is headed by James L. Cleveland, a development engineer at IBM. Other committee members include James DiDonna of Highway Pharmacy, vice chairman; Dick Ellis, Kingston Credit Bureau; Tony Bell, manager of WGHQ-WBPM; Dr. Albert J. Gruner, a dentist; Clifford Henze, chairman of the board of Heritage Savings Bank; and Thomas Tierney, assistant treasurer of Kingston Trust Company.

Also: Nicholas Morris of Kingston; Albert Teetsel, assistant cashier of the Rondout National Bank; Lawrence Geuss, owner of Colonial Cash Register; John Burns III, owner of Smith-Parish Roofing; John Fassbender, auditor of the Rondout National Bank; and Stuart S. Randle, president of Safford and Seudder.

Fastest Trickster and Aide

Denny, billed as the "World's Fastest Trickster," is aided by beautiful assistant Lee as he rehearses a routine for the All-Star Magic Revue to be presented in the George Washington School auditorium at 2 p.m. and 4:30 p.m. on Saturday, June 21, by Elks Lodge 550. Other acts slated for the show, which is for the benefit of cerebral palsied children, include the Singing Rand Family, who will do their version of favorite folk songs and popular hit tunes from their latest album. Invitations are being extended to deserving children to attend as guests of the Elks Lodge and local business and professional people. (Freeman photo)

County's Rising Divorce Rate . . . Part 2

Area Attorney, Psychiatrist, Marriage Counselor Give Views

Editor's Note — With Ulster County's divorce rate rapidly rising, an area attorney, psychiatrist and marriage counselor discuss the problem in the second of a three-part series on divorce.

By Lynn Mulvaney

KINGSTON

"Lots of couples not only do not have mutual likes, they don't even have mutual dislikes!"

Kingston attorney Seymour Werbalowsky, reflecting on deteriorating marriages in which both partners are yearning for some kind of better relationship, said he feels it is easier for each to go their separate ways rather than live a "pack of lies."

Many older couples have been held together through the strife and adversity of their children and when the children have grown the parents come to the realization that they lack respect and a feeling of companionship for their mates, he said.

If a first marriage proves an exercise in futility, then Werbalowsky feels there is no reason why "a second marriage cannot be beautiful."

Today, however, not all parents feel that it is best to stay together for the sake of the children. Some feel that peaceful living with one parent can be preferable to the entire family living in an emotionally-charged atmosphere.

A New York State study, a report of which was released this week, shows that there is a large increase in the number of children affected by the breakup of marriages. The number of children involved went from 2.87 per 1,000 in 1968 to 10.3 six years later.

"Marriage is a very serious step and no matter which way a divorce is arranged, it is extremely difficult and very harmful for children," Kingston gynecologist-obstetrician Dr. Kurken V. Kirk believes.

He urges that persons who have children weigh carefully any contemplated divorce for "it shouldn't be taken lightly."

Prof. Robert Kurland of Ulster County Community College, a marriage counselor, agrees that it can be bad for children if parents use the children against each other. But, he feels today many children are able to sort things out for themselves and manage to hold up quite well. "It's a give-and-take situation," he suggests, saying that sometimes children are better off under the circumstances of divorce than they would be living in a household fraught with unhappiness.

Also, today's new standard of living, wherein there are so many one-parent families, is making it easier on children of divorced parents. They find that with so many of their peers in the same boat, it is a far more comfortable situation to be in than it was perhaps even five or 10 years ago.

Dr. George Joseph, head of the Department of Psychiatry and the 21-bed Mental Health Unit of Benedictine Hospital, feels that basically man has known inner freedom for thousands of years and that the basic thinking, conflicts and inner feelings are the same in all men. Emotions are universal for all races, he suggests, recalling that many have experienced revolt.

The difference is that today, in the United States . . . in Ulster County, social acceptance and social opportunities have definitely improved for the divorced and therefore with liberalized law and liberalized acceptance, fewer and fewer are hesitating about going the dissolution route.

Dr. Joseph emphasized however that more and more people are coming for marriage counseling in hopes of heading off a divorce. Some are successful.

Prof. Kurland urges persons beginning to experience difficulties in marriage to seek help immediately. Usually by the time the couple reaches the divorce court it is too late, he said. Exceptions can occur when the proposed divorce was "just someone's ego talking."

Up until a year or two ago, all couples in the state contemplating divorce were required to go through a conciliation bureau where attempts were made to get the parties involved to seek a reconciliation if one or both of the parties had any doubt at all as to whether they wished a divorce or not.

While the conciliators claimed a limited success with the efforts of the bureau, most persons saw the bureau as merely a means of creating political plums throughout the state. Others felt it made the new divorce law somewhat more palatable for some, especially those of religious faiths opposed to divorce.

The cost of a divorce, judge's and attorney's views of court procedures and other aspects of the dissolution of marriages will be discussed in the concluding article.

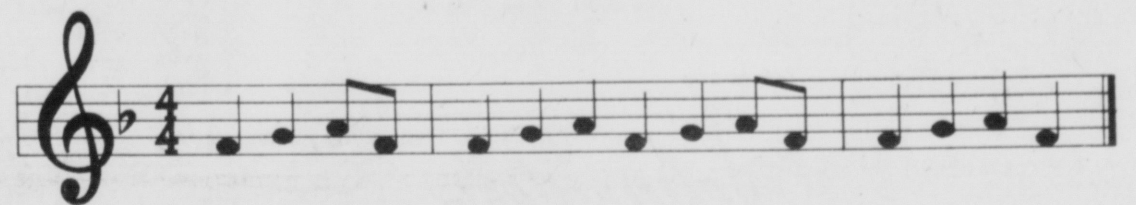

Contemplating Divorce
... Don't Take It Lightly

LIFE TODAY

Premiere of Musical America
... Tuneful Night at Playhouse

By Dorothy A. Narel

Harris Gordon, executive director of the Woodstock Playhouse, offered the area a wonderful Memorial Day gift in the presentation of MUSICAL AMERICA, a production filled with songs, dances and moods depicting this country's musical heritage.

It was the world premiere of the 1975 season for this group of five performers under the direction of Allan Lokos, producer-director.

"Musical America is solidly booked for the next nine months," Gordon told LIFE Friday night (May 23). After their Woodstock appearance, the beginning of their tour, Gordon said the performers will be appearing with the Houston Symphony Orchestra and will be going abroad also — to Japan.

If you didn't catch MUSICAL AMERICA you missed a tuneful evening of light, entertaining fare. Blueprint for the production included music covering a span of 200 years performed by young, professional talent complete with appropriate colorful costumes and an extremely adaptable stage set.

The show opened with the selection, "The sound of a Fife and a Drum," taken from the show OLD AMERICAN COMPANY done in the 1700's. MUSICAL AMERICA traced the development of this country's heritage with minstrels, Stephen Foster songs, show tunes from the days of Lillian Russell, George M. Cohan, Al Jolson, to the days of SHOWBOAT, PORGY AND BESS, LADY IN THE DARK AND OKLAHOMA!.

Time period covered in the second half spanned from 1945-

1974. Transitions were smooth and many of the selections were moving in sentiment. Productions represented included CAROUSEL, ANNIE GET YOUR GUN, FINIAN'S RAINBOW, KISS ME, KATE, SOUTH PACIFIC, KISMET, WEST SIDE STORY, FIDDLER ON THE ROOF, MAN OF LA MANCHA. The show concluded with selections from JESUS CHRIST SUPERSTAR and CANDIDE.

The production was more than just singing. The five stars also handled dramatic portions, danced, did comedy bits, each in a varying mood and time era. MUSICAL AMERICA is a marvelous showcase for these five talented performers who work with professional ease.

The show was refreshing and should do very well on tour. It also looks like a bright season at Woodstock Playhouse. A top-notch Equity Company will be in residence June 29 through Labor Day. Performances have been scheduled for Wednesdays through Sunday evenings. Monday nights will be reserved for special attractions, one of whom will be the famous music impresario Boris Goldovsky on July 21st. Who doesn't remember Goldovsky's radio appearances down through the years on the program "Metropolitan Opera of the Air."

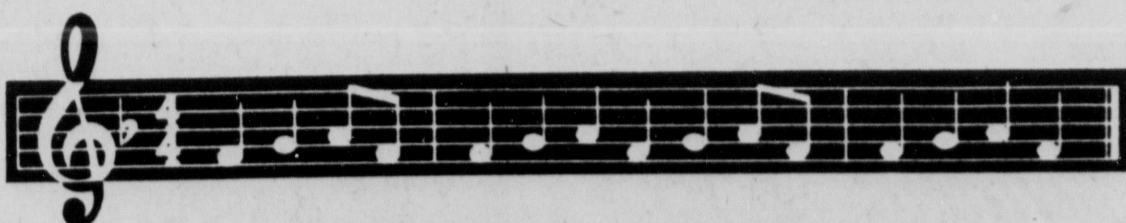

This Saturday, the New York Baroque Ensemble will be performing in the Playhouse with Howard Vogel as director. Their 18th Century music will include works by J. S. Bach.

Plays will include such favorites as Noel Coward's BLITHE SPIRIT, the Neil Simons production SUNSHINE BOYS and a new musical, to be announced.

Jacqueline Kroschell and William Covington in MUSICAL AMERICA. Also in the cast were James Wilson, tenor; Carol Flemming, mezzo-soprano; and Saverio Barbieri, bass.

200 Years of the most tuneful moments in the American musical theater—that was the offering during the Memorial Day weekend at the Woodstock Playhouse with the presentation of Musical America.

The spring concert held recently at the West Hurley School was dedicated to George Schroeder, former Hurley supervisor, in recognition of his numerous contributions to the youth of the community. Schroeder, who previously received the Jenkins Award from the P-TA, was presented with an engraved pewter plate by Mrs. Helen Haumacher, P-TA president, during ceremonies at the concert.

Saugerties Flower Plans

Flower Show Planning was the program topic as the members and guests of the Saugerties Society of Little Gardens met at the home of Mrs. Frank Greco.

The program was led by Mrs. William Waldele, program chairperson and member of the committee directing the society's 51st Annual Standard Flower Show to be held Wednesday, June 11, at the United Methodist Church, Washington Avenue, from 2:30 until 8:30 p.m.

Discussion included the duties and progress of the following committee for this year's flower show, A Country Garden:

Mrs. Daniel Lamb, staging. Mrs. May Beckert and Mrs. William Wadele, schedule. Mrs. William Everts, publicity. Mrs. John Jagodzinski, posters. Mrs. John Whitenor, Mrs. Roy Helmsmoortel, Miss Jane Ziegler and Mrs. Frank Greco, entries, horticulture. Mrs. Henry Breitenbach, entries, artistic. Mrs. William Wadele, judges. Mrs. John Whitenor, Mrs. Robert Freer, junior exhibits. Mrs. Gordon Keeley, Mrs. George Jorgensen, horticulture classification. Mrs. Hugo Knauer, education and conservation. Mrs. Robert Finger, Mrs. Brendan Dooley, commercial. Mrs. William Everts, awards horticulture. Mrs. Robert Finger, awards, artistic. Mrs. James Babb, tickets. Mrs. John Washburn and Mrs. Roy Helmsmoortel, ways and means. Mrs. Richar Cyr, hospitality and Mrs. Michael Mattia, Mrs. Augustus Modjeska, tea table.

Refreshments were served by hostess Mrs. Frank Greco and her committee, Mrs. O. Sande, Mrs. Gordon Keeley and Mrs. Robert Freer.

Grace Donovan Heads Kingston Columbiettes

Kingston Columbiettes held its May meeting at the Knights of Columbus Hall in Kingston.

Meeting with the membership were the Rt. Rev. Msgr. John J. O'Reilly, chaplain of the Columbiettes and William O'Leary, coordinator. Mrs. Elizabeth Sill, president, conducted the meeting.

Highlights included the crowning of the Blessed Mother, Monsignor's speech on the importance of the Blessed Mother, and election of new officers.

The following slate of new officers for 1975-1976 was introduced: Grace Donovan, president; Elizabeth Sill, past president; Mary Bruno, vice president; Rose DiPeri, recording secretary; Rita Chase, corresponding secretary; Adele Bruck, treasurer; Emily Coffey, financial secretary; Matilda Miuccio, inner guard; Rose Marie Concomon, outer guard; Loretta Ahl, trustee three years; delegates to Hudson Valley Chapter, Grace Donovan, Elizabeth Sill, Mary Bruno, Emily Coffey, Loretta Ahl; alternates, Rose DiPeri, Lucinda Tiano, Rita Chase, Mary Castiglione, Maureen Rice; delegates to the New York State Convention, Grace Donovan and Elizabeth Sill; alternates, Mary Bruno & Rose DiPeri.

The posters entered in the local poster contest were judged and the winners will be announced.

Refreshments were served by Maureen Rice and Marilyn Hurley.

Queen Ulster Rebekah . . . 69th Anniversary

Queen Ulster Rebekah Lodge will observe its 69th anniversary Tuesday, June 3, with a special program. Announcement of the anniversary meeting was made known during a meeting of Queen Ulster Lodge 34 held at the Odd Fellows Temple. All officers are requested to wear white at this event.

The annual memorial service for the deceased members of the lodge will be held Sunday, June 1, at the Congregational Church starting at 11 a.m.

All reservations for the bus trip to the Grand Lodge Home pilgrimage must be made no later than June 5 with Anna Minkler.

Announcement has been made that Queen Ulster will sponsor a booth at the Old Timers Day fete. Members are requested to donate articles for this.

An invitation has been received for the anniversary of Vineyard Rebekah Lodge, 572, and Sunshine Lodge, 929, to be held June 13 at the V.F.W. Hall, Route 208, south, just outside of New Paltz. A roast beef dinner will be served at 6:30 o'clock. Reservations must be made no later than June 5.

The following visiting committee was appointed: Ida Mower, Anna Minkler, Judith Martin, vicegrand and noble grand.

Refreshments were served by Blanche Dunn, Hannah Lewis and Ida Mower.

Book Sale By HVP

The "Last Saturday of the Month Book Sale" for the benefit of Hudson Valley Philharmonic will be held May 31 at 254 Albany Avenue, Kingston. Doors will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. This popular book sale is entering its fourth year and, according to a spokesman for the group, it has netted more than $4,000 to date for the HVP.

This is an impressive amount considering the low price of the books, and it shows that area residents have an active intellectual interest.

Hardback fictions and paperback science fictions are available, along with paperbacks and magazines.

The project can only be continued if there are enough books donated. The spokesman for the group expressed his gratitude to all private donors, libraries and estates who have supported this worthwhile cause.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Ickes accept books any day of the week or may be contacted for having books picked up.

Co-chairman Phil Sinagra reports that the whereabouts of more than 70 classmates is still unknown. Interested classmates should contact him at 17 Circle Drive, Hurley, or Angelo Fasano of 360 Clifton Avenue, for the names of the former students unable to be located. (Freeman photo)

Violin Students Plan Recital

A recital for violin students of Carole Premezzi is scheduled for 4 p.m. on Sunday, June 1, at the Ascension Church on Route 9W in West Park.

This will be a year-end performance by the students, aged 6 to 14, to demonstrate their individual talents and levels of achievement.

Mrs. Premezzi, herself an accomplished violinist, instructs at the Methodist Church in New Paltz and in Poughkeepsie. She also teaches chamber music ensembles and theory at the Hudson Valley Philharmonic Music School. In addition to her teaching schedule, she is professionally active as a violinist with the New Paltz College-Community Orchestra, the New Paltz Chamber Music Society, the Hudson Valley Philharmonic and the Haydn Festival Orchestra.

A graduate of Northwestern University and Yale University School of Music, she has studied and performed at Music festivals in Interlochen, Michigan, Aspen, Colorado, and Siena, Italy. She and her husband, Lance, a professor and musician, will participate in the International Institute of Music in Santander, Spain, this summer.

Students performing in the June concert are Mary Lou Jessup of Hyde Park, Lisa Baczynsky of Kingston, Ted Esplin, Nathaniel and Sun-Ling Liu of Poughkeepsie, Steven Ruscus of Highland, Tracy Sickler of Ulster Park, and Siita Karkala, Sarah Garlick, and Lee Ann Pritchard of New Paltz.

A student string quartet will feature violinists Susan Kessler and Karen Regh, violinist Elise Carlson, and cellist Tom Regh from the Poughkeepsie area. The public is invited.

Members of the Town of Ulster Senior Citizen Club celebrated their sixth anniversary Wednesday, May 21, with a banquet given in Holiday Inn.

Participating in the program were President Evelyn Scheffel and Russell Brott, club advisor.

Special recognition was given to Mr. and Mrs. Per Swanson on the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary, and to Mr. and Mrs. William Lifer who celebrated their anniversary last month.

It was announced election of officers is scheduled for Wednesday, June 4, at 7:30 p.m. in the Bonanza Branch of Heritage Savings Bank, Ulster Avenue Mall.

All members are asked to attend.

Onteora D.E.C.A. Banquet Friday

The Onteora Chapter of D.E.C.A. is having its fifth annual banquet Friday, May 30, at 6:30 p.m. at Onteora
Central School.

D.E.C.A. is a nationwide youth organization whose members are studying marketing and distribution.

Nancy Smith, chairperson, has announced that Eileen Harris, the D.E.C.A. state secretary, will be the main speaker. The banquet will feature the presentation of numerous awards including, for the first time, a business-person-of-the-year award.

All alumni of the Onteora
D.E.C.A. chapter are invited to the banquet as guests of this year's members. Any former members interested in attending may contact Nancy Smith, Patty Ticefelt, or call the Onteora Central School.

Spring, Summer Fashions

The safari look as seen by Rena Rowan — offers a four-pocket jacket over the new length in cuffed shorts — for the spring and summer wear this year.

Rena Rowan, also showing for Jones of New York, also models this tee shirt and skirt combination which promises to be the summer uniform for the young contemporaries. Both the safari look and the combination are available in local stores.

Double up, America.

Two can ride cheaper than one.

Former Resident Again at Fine Arts Camp

A former Kingston resident, who recently completed his fourth concert season as director of the Finger Lakes Symphony Orchestra, will again be director this summer at the Blue Lake Fine Arts Camp in Michigan.

He is Donald N. DeWitt, currently of Macedon. DeWitt, a graduate of Kingston High School, is the son of Mrs. Theresa DeWitt of 112 Ten Broeck Avenue.

DeWitt recently was featured as director of the Finger Lakes Symphony Orchestra during a personal appearance of singing star Carmel Quinn, a one-time performer with the popular Arthur Godfrey show.

The orchestral portion of this show included Dvorak, New World Symphony, Faure-Pavane, and Rodgers' Victory at Sea, all under the direction of DeWitt.

Following the musical concert, held at the Canandaigua Junior Academy, Miss Quinn and DeWitt were tendered a party at the Sheraton in Canandaigua. Also in attendance were DeWitt's wife and his mother, Mrs. Theresa DeWitt; Ted Auletta, pianist for Miss Quinn, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Russell. Russell is publicity manager for the symphony.

DeWitt's return to the Blue Lake Fine Arts Camp this summer will be his third as the director. Some 500 musical students register every two weeks at the camp.

Faculty members at Blue Lake are carefully selected from all parts of the country and guest faculty members come from Europe as well.

Performers, including bands, orchestras and choirs visit from Europe during the summer as guests while Blue Lake sends a band and orchestra to Europe in an exchange of good-will visits.

DeWitt, following graduation from Kingston High School, earned degrees from Potsdam College and Columbia University. He is a member of the New York State School Music Association and has been adjudicator for several years and has appeared on several occasions as guest conductor of bands and orchestras.

His wife, Joyce, also is a member of the Blue Lake faculty staff as a piano instructor. They are the parents of three children — Rodd, 18; Joel, 14 and Pamela, 11.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter, who is 25, is a nurse. She is engaged to a 29-year-old doctor. He is from India.

We are Irish Catholics. The young man was educated in England. He is well-mannered, quiet and from a good family (who is in India), and he plans to remain here and practice medicine.

Our problem is how our friends and relatives will react. Will they accept him? He is very dark. Will he be considered black?

Do you know what people's feelings are about white American girls dating and marrying people from India? Are our friends going to look down on him?

We would like to have a nice church wedding, to which he agrees, but are people going to criticize us?

They both seem to know what they are getting into. Can you help me?

WORRIED MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: If your daughter and her young man love each other and know what they are getting into, you have nothing to worry about. Whether or not he is "accepted" or considered black — or you are criticized — is beside the point. People who matter will accept him for what he is. And those who feel differently aren't worth bothering about.

DEAR ABBY: I am 10-years-old and recently heard of a new group called "Kid's Lib." Kids say that voting, drinking, smoking and many other activities should be legalized at age 13. My class talked about this and about 80 percent said, "This is cool." Abby, here's what I think: Kids don't have enough judgment to do any of these things until they reach 18. Even then, drinking and smoking are bad for kids, especially younger teenagers.

What do you think?

T.L. OBJECTS

DEAR T.L.: I think you've got a good head on your 10-year-old shoulders.

DEAR ABBY: According to official records, the number of deaths and injuries from fire has reached epidemic proportions.

In order to educate the public in fire prevention and control, the U.S. government has made some fascinating demonstrations available.

For instance, government agencies have contracted table-top-sized model homes that actually go up in flames from overloaded electric wiring. They also have graphic demonstrations that show how the fumes of flammable liquids travel great distances, causing explosions and fires.

These demonstrations make tremendously interesting programs for schools, organizations and industries, and are perfectly safe in the hands of trained personnel in the fire department.

Fire departments that have or have access to such units are happy to present them in public demonstrations. All an interested group need do is call its local fire department and request this program.

J.E. BROWN, CHIEF PANAMA CITY
BEACH, FLA.

DEAR CHIEF: I hope your letter lights a fire under the program chairmen of service clubs throughout the nation. And readers, please don't wait until Fire Prevention Week — which isn't until next October!

Kate Millett at Center

Kate Millett, one of the earliest and most prominent figures of the feminist movement and author of the well-known SEXUAL POLITICS, will initiate a summer feminist lecture series sponsored by the Woodstock Women's Center. Ms. Millett will read from and discuss her most recent book, FLYING, at the Women's Center Thursday, May 29, at 8:30 p.m.

On Thursday, June 5, at 8:30 p.m., Margo Jefferson, a black feminist and associate editor of Newsweek, will appear at the Women's Center to talk about "Aspects of Black and White Feminism" as the second lecturer in the series, which is scheduled to continue through August. Lectures in this series will be held at the Woodstock Women's Center, 59A Tinker Street (over the Cafe Espresso). All women are welcome.

On Friday, May 30, at 9 p.m. the Woodstock Women's Center coffeehouse will feature Derride McCalla, a Roulette recording artist. Ms. McCalla, a student at Vassar, has attended the National Theatre Institute in Connecticut. Her first album, "Fur Coats and Blue Jeans," has been called a "beautiful and romantic album." On Friday, June 6, New York poet Susan Sherman will appear at the coffeehouse to read from her work. The reading will be followed by an open discussion. All women are welcome.

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market opened mixed today in active trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones industrial average, a 5.79-point loser Tuesday, was off 1.09 to 825.02 shortly after the opening. Advances led declines, 164 to 161, among the 481 issues crossing the tape.

Turnover amounted to around 580,000 shares.

Early Wall Street reaction to President Ford's decision to raise the oil import tax $1 a barrel and to decontrol "old" oil prices was mixed.

action, and bearing date of the 21st day of May, 1975, I, the undersigned, the Referee in said Judgment named, will sell at public auction at the front steps of the Ulster County Courthouse, 285 Wall Street, Kingston, New York, on the 27th day of June, 1975, at 10:00 o'clock in the forenoon, (Eastern Daylight Savings Time) of that day, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold and therein described as follows:
ALL that parcel of land situate in the Village of Ellenville, in the Town of Wawarsing, in the County of Ulster in the State of New York, described as follows:
BEGINNING at a point on the southeasterly line of Lake Drive said point of beginning being distant 111.92 feet measured southwesterly along the southeasterly line of Lake Drive from the intersection of the southeasterly line of Lake Drive with the southeasterly line of Roselyn Street; thence southwesterly along the southeasterly line of Lake Drive 223.60 feet; thence southeasterly with a deflection angle of 90° to the left, 306.40 feet to the northwesterly line of Siegel Drive; thence northwesterly with a deflection angle of 89° and 22' to the left and along the northwesterly line of Siegel Drive, 65.69 feet; thence northwesterly with a deflection angle of 80° to the left 130 feet; thence northwesterly with a deflection angle of 80° to the right, 100 feet; thence northwesterly with a deflection angle of 80° to the left, 183.82 feet to the southeasterly line of Lake Drive and the place of beginning.

All distances are horizontal measurement.
The parcel of land above described is a portion of the first parcel of land described in the deed from Emma Elting, Olive Burlison and W.C. Derby Elting to Jack Siegel and Roselyn Siegel, his wife, said deed being dated December 11, 1943 and recorded in the Ulster County Clerk's Office on December 24, 1943 in Liber 638 of deeds at page 381.
The above premises are conveyed subject to the following restrictive covenants to run with the land:
1. That no buildings shall be built wholly or partly within 20 feet of the front or street line as shall be hereafter constructed.
2. That no dwelling house shall be erected on said premises that shall have a construction value of less than $5,000.00.

Legal Notice

3. That the said premises shall be used for residential purposes only, and that no store, shop, hotel or factory, or any business shall be erected or conducted on said premises.
The parties of the first part hereby grant to the parties of the second part, a right of way over that portion of the premises of the parties of the first part herein above referred to as Lake Drive and Siegel Drive and as plotted on the map made by P. Edwin Clark, Civil Engineer, Ellenville, New York, for the purpose of ingress, egress and regress.
This right of way if granted upon the express condition that when the said Lake Drive and Siegel Drive as above set forth and plotted has been conveyed to the Village of Ellenville, New York, and has been accepted by said Village of Ellenville, New York, as public streets said right of way shall cease and determine.
BEING the same premises as conveyed by Jack Siegel and Roselyn Siegel, his wife to Peter Messina and Jeane Messina, his wife by deed dated June 19, 1950 and recorded in the Ulster County Clerk's Office June 20, 1950 in Liber 767 at page 471.

Stanley Cup Champs Prove Last Year Wasn't a Fluke

CUP IS PRESENTED BY NHL CHIEF CLARENCE CAMPBELL

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — While his teammates poured and drank champagne, Bernie Parent sipped a cup of cola. "I need sugar," Parent said with a huge smile on his face. "With champagne you get sick and I want to enjoy it."

The Philadelphia Flyers' goaltender didn't want anything to foul up his moment of triumph Tuesday night as the Flyers celebrated their second consecutive Stanley Cup Championship after beating the Buffalo Sabres 2-0 to win the final playoff series four games to two and complete hockey's longest season.

"What the hell, let's put it this way," said Parent, who won the Conn Smyth Trophy as the MVP of the playoffs for the second year in a row, "we got here with a team effort."

"Now that we've won I can honestly say it's a better feeling to win two years in a row."

When we won last year we were in the clouds. This year it was different because we knew what we were doing and where we were going. We proved to everyone that last year was no fluke."

A goal by a man who didn't even know if he would dress for the game—Bob Kelly—proved to be the game and Stanley Cup winner for the Flyers.

Kelly, just 11 seconds into the third period, dug the puck off the boards and tucked it into the far corner of the Buffalo goal past Roger Crozier.

"The puck was there when I turned so I tried to stuff it into the corner," said Kelly. "It wasn't planned. I don't score enough goals to plan them."

Kelly, an alternate all year for the Flyers, said he was worried Tuesday morning that he might not dress for the game.

"That's only one play," Kelly added. "It took a lot of games I didn't participate in to get here. I was lucky. Twenty-three guys got it, not just one."

Philadelphia Coach Fred Shero, who sat in an adjacent room talking with writers while his team celebrated because "the players won it," said he didn't know if Kelly would play in the game or not.

"I didn't even know myself until gametime whether he would play or not," Shero said. "My coaches and assistants were mad at me for not playing him enough."

Bill Clement sealed the victory with 2:47 left, taking a pass from Orest Kindrachuk and sailing in alone, slipping the puck between Crozier's pads.

"The feeling is about the same as last year," Shero added. "The reason I'll probably be happier this year is we ended up in first place and still won the cup. Last year we snuck up on a lot of people."

"The key to the series was Parent and (Bobby) Clarke."

Clarke, the Flyers' captain, sat in the corner of the boisterous dressing room, trying to get his feelings together.

"I don't know which year was better," Clarke said of the two consecutive championships. "Right now I don't even know what I'm feeling."

Sabres Coach Floyd Smith walked through the Flyers' dressing room, offering congratulations and shaking hands with the players.

"We're just not quite good enough yet," Smith said. "Maybe the next time around."

Buffalo failed to capitalize on six powerplay opportunities with Parent making brilliant saves on several occasions.

"I thought we were good enough to win," Smith added, "but I guess we weren't. Maybe our inexperience showed at times."

Smith shook hands with Shero and the Flyers coach paid the fifth-year expansion Sabres a tribute of sorts.

"They gave us a better series than anybody did last year," Shero said.

To the Flyers the victory was worth $15,000 per man while the Sabres received $10,000 apiece.

Philadelphia Goes Wild Over Those Flyers

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Last year, when the Philadelphia Flyers won their first Stanley Cup, the city had a parade and was afraid nobody would show up.

An estimated two million persons, just about equal to the city's population, did.

The city was ready for an equally heavy throng expected today when the Flyers are hailed for beating the Buffalo Sabres 2-0 Tuesday night to become the first National Hockey League team since 1969 to win successive Stanley Cups.

The victory produced a spontaneous outpouring of people on the streets in the Philadelphia area late Tuesday night and early today, blowing car horns, setting off firecrackers, banging pots and pans and blowing New Year's Eve horns.

As the Flyers' Bernie Parent, winner of the Conn Smyth trophy as the outstanding player, was appearing on a post-game television show saying, "Thank you for supporting us, Philadelphia fans," an estimated 20,000 persons poured out into the streets in south Philadelphia near the Flyers' Spectrum home.

The northeast section of the city had a large crowd of celebrants in the streets. The crowds blocked traffic in many areas, but police said they did not cause any disturbances.

The team arrived back here at Philadelphia International Airport in the early morning hours today but disembarked at an isolated and guarded section of the field to discourage any disorganized and rowdy welcome. The players were driven away in chartered buses to prepare for today's motorcade.

The motorcade was scheduled to start in the downtown section of the city at 10:30 a.m. EDT and move down Broad Street to John F. Kennedy Stadium, which seats some 100,000 persons.

Last year, the motorcade started in the opposite direction, at the Spectrum across the street from Kennedy Stadium, and moved up into the city's business section just at the noon rush hour.

That motorcade ended at Independence Mall, an area that was too small to accommodate all those who came out to hail the city's first major championship since 1967.

"What happened last year was a little bit bigger than a Flyers victory," said City Representative and Director of Commerce Harry R. Belinger. "It was pentup emotion of the most sports-minded town in the country" hailing a winner after so many years.

"Also we were dealing with a sport that plays in an arena that seats 17,000 and was not widely covered by national television," he said. "It was very difficult to estimate how many people were going to turn out for the parade. We were concerned we would have a parade and nobody would show up."

"Obviously, our concern was unnecessary," Belinger said wryly.

He said that after last year's celebration city officials met to discuss "what we did and what we would do again" for any future celebrations.

"Any kind of celebration should be one that everybody can enjoy," Belinger said. "One that all of us can enjoy and be proud of. We can't have wanton destruction. The important thing is to cool it so that everybody can enjoy it."

Belinger said the main points discussed at last year's meeting were "reflected in the time of the start of the parade, the route of march and where the ceremonies were held."

As a result, this year's parade was scheduled to start on Market Street, one of the city's widest streets, move away from the business section and terminate in a larger arena.

The players also were on floats instead of the convertibles used last year. "The whole idea," Belinger said, "was to make the players visible but not accessible. The convertibles were too low and as a result people were pressing in, and we lost the lane."

The parade had to be stopped a number of times last year as the crowd surged around the players' cars, sometimes engulfing them.

SIPPING CHAMPAGNE FROM CUP

FREEMAN ADS BRING RESULTS

Mets Have Mound Woes

NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Mets wrestled with a problem today which they never expected to face: erratic pitching.

Since 1969 when the oneeuphet Mets came of age they always have been able to rely on strong pitching. Bad hitting ... slow base-running ... slovenly fielding, yes, but erratic pitching, no.

Pitching has always been their pride and joy. But this season things are different and they sure were at Shea Stadium Tuesday night when the Los Angeles Dodgers "took batting practice during the game" for a 10-4 victory.

Harry Parker was bombed out on six hits and four runs in 2-3 innings and the Dodgers kept hammering away at three successors for their easy triumph.

Meanwhile, Burt Hooton went the distance with a six-hitter to raise his record to 3-4 behind a 13-hit attack which included two homers by Jim Wynn and a three-run homer by Dave Lopes. Steve Garvey, the National League's MVP in 1974, added two RBIs.

Wynn's first homer of the game came in the third inning and followed a single by Lopes and his second stolen base, a single, an infield out and a double by Hooton.

Lopes hit his homer in the sixth after an error and a single put two runners on base and Wynn belted his second homer of the game in the sixth.

Ed Kranepool homered for the Mets.

The Mets are still searching for a solid No. 4 starter to join Tom Seaver, Jon Matlack and Jerry Koosman in the starting rotation. Rookie Randy Tate sparkled in his last outing but the starting possibilities drop off drastically after him.

There was encouraging word from Florida, though, in that George Stone, who suffered a torn muscle in his arm last season after winning 11 games the previous year, went nine innings to win with the Mets' minor league club.

The Dodgers, meanwhile, who boosted their NL West lead to 2½ games over idle Cincinnati, sent Doug Rau, 5-3, against Matlack, also 5-3, in the finale of their three-game series tonight.

In other National League games, San Francisco blanked Philadelphia, 1-0, in 10 innings; Atlanta downed Chicago, 7-2; Pittsburgh edged Houston, 6-5; and St. Louis trounced San Diego, 7-1.

John Montefusco limited the Phillies to just five hits after predicting before the game he would pitch a shutout. Pinch-hitter Glenn Adams doubled home Von Joshua to break up a scoreless tie in the 10th as the young Giants posted their eighth win in nine games. It was Montefusco's third win in five decisions.

Lou Brock hit for the cycle against San Diego, including a game-winning triple in the fifth and a solo homer in the third as St. Louis staked Bob Forsch to his fifth win. Brock also stole his 14th base.

Bill Robinson singled home Willie Stargell for the winning run with two out in the ninth inning during a three-run Pittsburgh rally. Cesar Cedeño homered for Houston.

Bases loaded singles by Marty Perez and Ralph Garr—both accounting for two runs—helped Atlanta ace Phil Niekro beat Chicago and even his record at 4-4.

Fitzmorris Steals Show

SAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — There was a pitching gem hurled in Royals Stadium Tuesday night but it wasn't by Jim "Catfish" Hunter. And that's who 20,592 paid to see pitch.

Instead, Al Fitzmorris treated the crowd to one of his best performances ever. The Kansas City Royals' right-hander set down the New York Yankees on three singles and scored a 3-0 victory over Hunter.

"The ball was sinking well and I was keeping it down," said Fitzmorris, who lifted his record to 7-3. "Really, I felt good all night. I started a little shaky and got behind (Bobby) Bonds 3-0 and that gets you to thinking a little."

Fitzmorris, however, walked none and struck out three. His sinkerball forced 19 groundouts.

The Yankees, in fact, got only six balls out of the infield. Three were singles—by Roy White in the fourth, Graig Nettles in the fifth and Bonds in the ninth—and three others were fly outs.

"I guess that's as good a sinkerball as I've had with that many ground balls," Fitzmorris said. "But I really can't tell. I'm looking at the catchers' mitt and the bat."

Fitzmorris was making his first appearance against New York since 1972 and that was a relief effort.

The victory was Kansas City's sixth straight and 12th in its last 16 games. Hunter, 6-5, had won four straight before the loss.

He wasn't exactly roughed up, though, yielding six hits.

The Royals scored in the first on Hal McRae's double and Harmon Killebrew's single. They added two more in the sixth on a single by George Brett, a triple by Vada Pinson and a single by Fran Healy.

Hunter might have escaped the two-run sixth but Bonds and Elliott Maddox got their signals crossed on Pinson's blow to right-center and it fell for a triple.

"That made a big difference," Fitzmorris said. "Three runs instead of one is big in the late innings."

The Royals, 5-0 on this homestand, close tonight against the Yankees with Nellie Briles, 4-2, scheduled to face New York's Rudy May, 3-2.

Milwaukee beat Chicago, 9-8, Minnesota edged Detroit, 6-5, Cleveland beat California, 6-3, and Oakland topped Baltimore, 4-2, in other American League games. Boston at Texas was rained out.

Milwaukee manager Del Crandall decided which players he was going to use, then put their names in a hat and had the team draw to determine a starting lineup. With Robin Yount, the team's leading hitter, in the ninth spot, Hank Aaron batting sixth, and DH Bobby Mitchell leading off, the Brewers collected 12 hits to top Chicago. Mitchell hit a three-run homer and Aaron and Charlie Moore drove in two runs each.

Rod Carew, who homered earlier, delivered a sacrifice fly to cap a two-run ninth inning that gave Minnesota its victory over Detroit. Danny Thompson singled home the tying run prior to Carew's game-winning sacrifice fly. Larry Hise had a three-run homer for the Twins and Ron LeFlore had an inside-the-park homer for the Tigers.

Pinch-hitter Charlie Spikes walked with the bases loaded to force in the go-ahead run and John Ellis followed with a two-run single to highlight a three-run eighth inning which led Cleveland over California.

You can also fail it with your eyes closed.

We call it the Utica Club Bar Exam.

You'll call it a nice test. Because if you fail it, you'll just have to take it over again. Until you get it right.

Here's how it works. Take any two beers of your choice. And one of ours. Utica Club. Pour them all into mugs.

Have someone blindfold you (or at least mix the mugs up) just to make sure you taste the beers, not the labels.

Now, taste. Which one would you move to the head of the class?

In tests like this conducted in colleges in upstate New York, Utica Club was preferred more often than not.

Much to the surprise of everyone, except us.

Because we know the things that go into a Utica Club. The water that's good enough to bottle and sell by itself. The ingredients that cost a little more but make our beer worth a little more. And the most expensive ingredient of all: extra time.

If you picked out the Utica Club, we both pass. If you picked another beer, we fail. If you couldn't pick anyone out, try again. And don't fail to notice that your favorite beers didn't taste better to you than our favorite.

Why did you have to be blindfolded to find out how good Utica Club is?

Sometimes, the best way to open your eyes is to close them.

Utica Club

Utica Club introduces a test you can pass with your eyes closed.

Braves' Protest Upheld

ATLANTA (UPI) — The Atlanta Braves announced Tuesday their protest of a May 15 game with the Expos at Montreal, halted by rain, was upheld by National League President Charles Feeney.

A Braves spokesman quoted Feeney as saying, "The umpire called the game without waiting the required time and at the time the game was terminated, the weather and field conditions would have erred the game to be resumed. The Atlanta protest of the game in Montreal on Thursday May 15 is upheld."

The game was called by umpire Chris Pelekoudas with Montreal batting in the fourth inning, one man on base, one out and Atlanta leading 4-1. The decision meant the game would have to be rescheduled in its entirety.

The Braves contended the umpire called the game without waiting a requisite length of time before making the decision and that the weather and field conditions would have permitted the game to be completed had the decision by Pelekoudas been delayed a few minutes longer.

The Braves said Feeney ordered the game to be resumed at the point where interrupted and be played to completion before the Atlanta at Montreal game July 20.

Another Bowler of the Year, Betty Morris, who won the award in 1974, was second after Donna Dillon of Dallas, 216-214, in the sixth game. Miss Dillon was in third place.

Non-relatives Pat and Patty Costello were 1-2, after 18 games of qualifying with Patty, the lefty, one pin behind. Both were 3-3 in their first matches and ranked eighth and 10th, respectively Tuesday.

The tournament concludes today with two six-game sessions.

Recovering

Tom Sneva, the 26-year-old ex-high school principal from Spokane, Wash., who was injured in a spectacular flaming crash during Sunday's 500-mile race, manages a smile as he recuperates in hospital. Special salve to heal the burns cover much of his face. Sneva says the accident—which happened on the 127th lap when he was running fifth—hasn't discouraged him from the sport, and he plans to be back at the wheel soon. He says he doesn't recall much of the crash, when he tangled with another car, but adds "It's good to be here."

ROME (UPI) — For most of the seeds at the Italian International Tennis Championships the opening rounds of play were little more than sparring sessions.

All the seeds take the court today to either sprout or be weeded out by the large field of eager young hopefuls who dominate the $120,000 tournament.

Doubles players also join the action today with key interest centered on Jimmy Connors and Ilie Nastase, seeded only third by the Italian organizers.

The top singles seeds—Bjorn Borg and Chris Evert—had little more than warmup sessions in their debut matches Tuesday.

Ezzard Charles Dies: Ex-Heavyweight Champ

CHICAGO (UPI) — Former heavyweight champion Ezzard Charles, 54, died in his sleep early today at the Veterans Administration Westside Hospital where he had been a patient since March 4, 1974.

Attendants said Charles was suffering from amyotrophic lateral sclerosis.

Charles, sometimes called the "Cincinnati Cobra," gained recognition as the heavyweight boxing champion by winning a 15-round decision over Jersey Joe Walcott in Chicago on June 22, 1949. The title had been vacant since Joe Louis' retirement in March.

Attendants at the Veterans Hospital said Charles died at 3:50 a.m. CDT.

Born in Lawrenceville, Ga., July 7, 1921, Charles became an amateur boxer and won all 42 of his bouts before turning professional. As he grew up, his hero was Joe Louis.

After Charles became champion, Louis made a comeback and on Sept. 27, 1950, he lost a decision to Charles.

Charles was the champion for more than two years until Jersey Joe Walcott knocked him out in the seventh round in Philadelphia on July 18, 1951. It was his eighth defense.

In 1954, Charles tried to make a comeback but lost twice to champion Rocky Marciano, losing the first time in a decision and by an eighth round knockout in the second.

He kept fighting until 1959 and finished with a ring record of 96 wins, including 58 knockouts, and 26 losses. Although never a popular champion, he was elected to the Boxing Hall of Fame in 1970.

In recent years, Charles helped with community projects in Chicago's Englewood area. In 1971, the Ezzard Charles School, a Montessori school, was founded on Chicago's South Side.

"Ez is a great guy," said the Rev. Clyde Allison during a recent visit to Charles at the hospital. "He's an amazing guy. The thing is he can't talk, he can't move his hands. He can't do anything, but when I see him he has a smile on his face."

Maroons Leaders In Chess

KINGSTON

Kingston High School won the first place team trophy in the Mid-Hudson High School Chess Tournament Sunday in Wappingers Falls.

The Maroons were paced by Greg Peck, who placed second behind Ketcham's Bob Cammaratta and took home an individual trophy. Bob Moss and Steve Turnbull of Kingston finished third and fifth, respectively.

Also contributing to the Kingston success were Oliver Sifilis (16th), Dave Smith (19th) and Paul DePippo (33rd). Fifteen schools and 40 players participated in the tournament.

Davis Leader In Qualifier

DOWNEY, Calif. (UPI) — Despite a subpar 162 in his second game of the round, tall and lanky Dave Davis, a 14time titlist from Atlanta, took over first place Tuesday as qualifying continued in the $75,000 Professional Bowlers' Association national championship at Brunswick Wonderland.

As the field of 168 moved into today's third and final eightgame elimination set, Davis, who has captured two of the last three PBA events staged, held a sizeable lead of 74 pins over Rick Carrubba, Hayward, Calif., who is trying for his first pro bowling championship.

JoAnne Carner Plays for Pride

PINE PLAINS

In 1974 JoAnne Carner did what everyone familiar with the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour knew she would do someday.

The 36-year-old Mrs. Carner was the LPGA's Player of the Year and leading money winner with $87,570, the first time in the last five years that someone other than Kathy Whitworth took home the most money.

And it happened to JoAnne Carner because of pride.

"Money is secondary for me," says the former amateur golf great. "I feel I'm playing for pride. It's an ego trip for me. The thing is to win. If I'm not up there I lose interest in the game," she says, eyeing the $50,000 Girl Talk Classic June 6-8 at the All-American Golf and Tennis Club at Carvel Farms.

It was that same lost interest in the game which convinced JoAnne to turn professional in 1970.

She was a five-time winner of the U.S. Amateur (1956-60, 62-66), a four-time member of the Curtis Cup team and captured the LPGA Burdine's in Miami as an amateur.

But husband Don noticed something about her golf game in 1970 and suggested she turn professional, something which JoAnne did not consider very much prior to that. She didn't need the money, because Don is a successful jewelry manufacturer.

She needed the competition, however.

"I confessed to him that I was getting stale and bored. He thought I was wasting my talents as an amateur and turning pro would revive my interest in golf."

And it did. She quickly won her first tournament at Ocean Shores, Wash., and went on to earn over $15,000 and Rookie of the Year honors in 1970, at the age of 31.

In 1971 JoAnne came into her own on the tour, finishing sixth in money winnings with $21,604 and capturing titles in the USGA Open and the Bluegrass Invitational.

In 1972 and 1973 she failed to win a tournament, ranking 15th and 25th, respectively, in money won with $18,900 and $19,700.

But 1974 was JoAnne Carner's year. She again won the Bluegrass Invitational at the Hunting Creek Country Club in Prospect, Ky., this time defeating Sandra Spuzich in a playoff. The next week JoAnne won the Hoosier LPGA Classic at the Plymouth Country Club in Plymouth, Ind., and two weeks later came back to earn a $20,000 first-place check in the Desert Inn Classic in Las Vegas.

In less than one month, JoAnne had captured three of four LPGA events and $30,000 in prize money.

She was to go on and finish first in three more tournaments and record five second-place finishes to jump from 25th to No. 1 on the LPGA tour in one year.

"You find your mind wandering a lot out there on the course," says JoAnne, one of the longest hitters on the women's tour. "The hardest thing is controlling your emotions, not getting nervous in those long waits between shots. That emotion puts the pressure on you and if you can't control that pressure, you're in trouble."

It's like leading the last lap of a mile race and feeling the pack closing in on you."

But JoAnne Carner isn't playing golf for the money. She doesn't really need it. She's playing for pride and that's the most important thing to her.

"Without that pride, without that desire to win just for the sake of winning and not necessarily for the money, you might as well not play," JoAnne says. "Pride means a lot to everyone on the tour. It makes us professionals."

Esopus Slalom Slated June 7-8

PHOENICIA

The 12th annual running of the Esopus Slalom will be held Saturday and Sunday, June 7-8 on the Esopus Creek here under the sponsorship of the Kayak and Canoe Club of New York and the Phoenicia Rotary Club.

The races will start at 10 a.m. on Saturday and run until about 5 p.m. The Sunday events start at 9 a.m. and be completed by mid-afternoon.

Most of the top names in the white water field in the northeast are expected to compete.

There will be approximately 150 individual runs each day over the one-quarter-mile slalom course set in the turbulent Railroad Rapid of the Esopus Creek.

Paddling classes are based on International Canoe Federation (ICF) regulations: K1 (one-man kayak); K1W (woman); C1 (one-man canoe), C2 (two men); and C2M (one man one woman). There will also be sub-junior (under 15), junior (15-19) and a Masters category for those 40 and over.

The course will be the regulation 30 gates which must be negotiated in a pre-determined downstream, upstream and backward pattern. All boats will be decked, cock-pitted, racing boats. There will be no open classes. Each boater will run once on Saturday and again on Sunday.

The total running time and the penalties for gate touches will be added on each run and the better run of the two counts as the contestant's score.

Saturday's events will close with the Team Race at about 3 p.m. In this event which will not be repeated on Sunday, three boats run the course at a time. All classes will be represented. This event affords an excellent opportunity for a condensed view of the total sport, the top paddlers in action and the most excitement.

This slalom is one of the most spectacular in the country for viewing. The railroad embankment of Railroad Rapid provides an unobstructed view of the race course at the point of the heaviest water. The viewing area is reached by proceeding north on Route 28 to a point just past the turnoff for Phoenicia. A "canoe race" sign will mark the left turn onto a small rapid which soon crosses the Esopus Bridge at the head of the rapid.

Parking is available. Camping for racers on the site and for spectators at Woodland Valley and other local campgrounds which can be located by inquiries to the Phoenicia Rotary Race Chairman, Tony Valentine. There will be a snack stand open all day and a church supper Saturday night.

Crews Are Gathering

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (UPI) —

Some 80 crews and nearly 600 oarsmen representing 24 colleges and universities gather here today for the start Thursday of the 73rd National Intercollegiate Rowing Championships on Onondaga Lake.

Qualifying heats will be launched at 8:30 a.m. with repechage, or second chance heats, on Friday.

The finals of the eight championships events, expected to draw more than 10,000 spectators, are scheduled for Saturday.

Wisconsin's varsity eight will be vying to become only the third college to take top honors for three consecutive years. Cornell had a string of four consecutive titles from 1955-1958 while Pennwon three in a row beginning in 1967.

The regatta came to Syracuse in 1952.

Wisconsin, easy winner for the past two years, expects a more difficult time this time. Crew handicappers have made MIT a co-favorite with the Badgers, while Coast Guard, Northeast, Penn and Cornell could also challenge for the title.

British Matchmaker Sees Big Flaw in Ali

NEW YORK (UPI) — British matchmaker and promoter Mickey Duff, who represents European heavyweight champion Joe Bugner, was mightily pleased with the arrangements he helped hammer out for Bugner to challenge Muhammad Ali on June 30 in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia.

"Ali always has had this flaw," Mickey said Tuesday when the match was finalized with the money not announced but generally believed to be $2.2 million for Muhammad and $500,000 for Bugner.

"The flaw," Duff repeated, "is that Ali can not now, or ever could, fight the full three minutes of a round. It doesn't take a puncher to beat Ali, I insist. It takes someone who can go the full three minutes and make Ali go the full three as well.

"Ali's older, and his legs will go. Bugner's young and his legs are good. If he can get a point edge on Ali the way Ron Lyle did, Joe will win going away."

Duff didn't discount the fact that his man lost to Ali over 12 rounds in Las Vegas in February 1973.

"Joe got a bad cut over his left eye just 20 seconds into the fight, you know," Duff recalled. "He had to run like a thief for four rounds until the flow of blood was stopped, and then he went to work on Ali. If the fight had been for 15, I'm sure Joe would have got the nod."

As for Bugner's other distinctive loss, that to Joe Frazier, Duff also claims in a 15-rounder Frazier would have been finished. "Frazier was so exhausted after the 12th round they had to pull the stool out and help him onto it. Bugner would have finished him in the next round or so," Duff declared.

Prior to the Ali-Bugner match, Madison Square Garden will offer two other title matches.

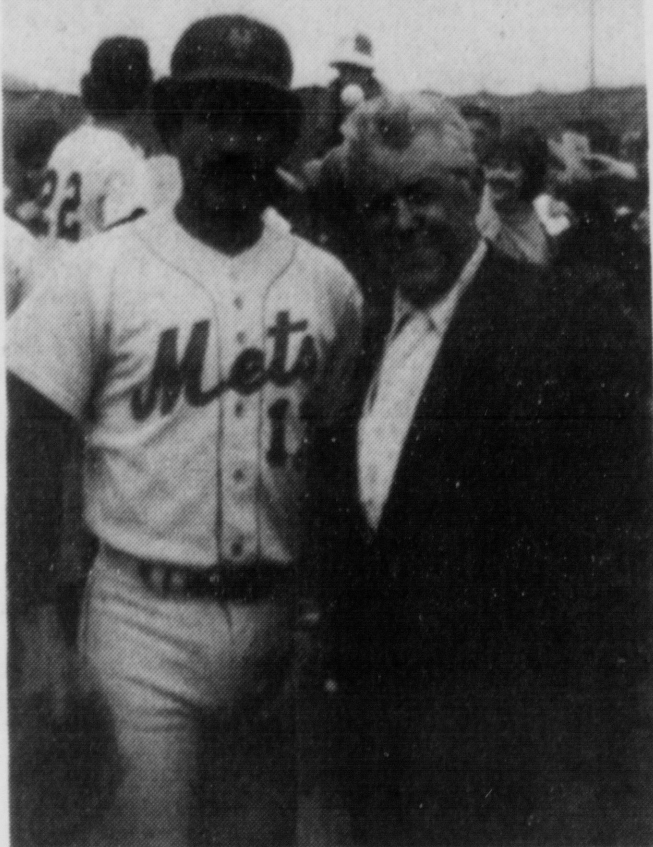

Carlos Monzon will make his first American appearance by defending his middleweight title against Tony Licata, a half-Chinese fighter from New Orleans who at 23 is ten years younger than Monzon. Monzon has an impressive string of 78 victories included in his overall 85 wins in 98 fights.

In a lighthweight match, World Boxing Association king Victor Galindez will fight his fellow Argentinian Jorge Ahumada.

Ahumada, who lost three of four bouts to Galindez before coming to the United States, wound up in a controversial draw when he fought then-champion Bob Foster. He next dropped a 15-round verdict to Britain's John Conteh in a match which saw the World Boxing Council recognize Conteh as champion.

The triple header show in New York was put together by Don King, Video Techniques and the Garden, but the Ali-Bugner portion is strictly a King-Video deal. Their most notable venture was the Ali-George Foreman title bout in Zaire last year, in which that African government was a prime underwriter.

Another government is tied in with the Ali-Bugner bout. The patron of the match has been announced as Tun Haji Abdul Razak bin Hussein, the prime minister of Malaysia.

Reunion Thursday

Felix Millan (L) New York Mets second baseman and Fred Davi, the area's biggest Yankee rooster, will be reunited Thursday night when Millan speaks at the Glasco-East Kingston Little League banquet at 7:30 p.m. The 1974 champion Greco Brothers Dodgers will be honored at the banquet. The picture was taken at the recent Mets exhibition at West Point.

Amendola Overcomes The Handicap Computer

KINGSTON A reduction in handicap from 27 to 20 failed to deter James Amendola, the bowling great, from embellishing his fast rising golf career with a two-stroke victory in the Justice Bruhn Memorial tournament at The Twaalfskill Club.

Amendola carded a net 63 with 83 gross and 20 for a two-stroke margin over four players tied for the runnerup spot.

Dan Bernard posted 83-18-65; Tom Spada 87-22-65; Dan McGrane 87-22-65; Pete Bonavita 83-18-65. Sharing a three-way with net 66s were Walt Jeghers 88-22, William Livingston 82-16, Tony Spada 76-10. Dan Gaffney had low gross of the day with even par 70 and netted 70-3-67. John Provenzano had 80-11-69.

Mrs. William Pugliese of New Paltz scored her second tournament victory in a row in the Twaalfskill Women's Flag Day event. With 29 handicap strokes, she advanced to within 19 feet of the 19th hole.

Mrs. Hubert Richter (25) was runnerup, 20 feet from the 18th hole. Mrs. Bernard Feeney Jr. (19) finished 50 yards from the 18th hole and Mrs. Bud Potter (26) ended 60 yards from the 18th hole.

Dan Gaffney's three handicap strokes enabled him to lead the men's division of the Flag tournament, as he advanced to within three feet of the 19th pin. Second place went to Stirling Potter (22) 20 yards from the 19th cup.

Richard Griggs (21) finished 50 yards from the 19th cup; Tony Spada (10) 80 yards from 19th cup and Gene Gruner (12) and Dr. Michael Diacovo (14) in the cup on the 18th.

Van Wagenen Proves Point

WOODSTOCK Does a low handicap golfer have a chance in one of those so-called Points Tournaments in golf? Well, if you ask Ross Van Wagenen, a 5-handicapper, he'll tell you he had a wonderful time in holiday tournament at Woodstock Country Club.

The golfing constable fired a 2-under par, 36-hole score of 68-70-138 on his own ball to accumulate 109 points and lead a field of 30 players. Points are awarded on the basis of one for a bogey, two for par, four for birdie and eight for eagles, with handicap strokes being allotted as they fall on the card.

Van Wagenen, a powerful threat in the Woodstock Open this year, fashioned 10 birdies in the 36 holes, six in the first round when he carved out nines of 31-37. He posted 38-32 in the finale.

Don Murphy, 11 handicap, and Russ Bruggess, a 24-handicapper, tied for second with 101 points. Jerry McIntyre (12) and John Stelcin (19) scored 100 points each.

Burgess led the field at the end of the first round with an accumulation of 61 points and McIntyre was runnerup with 60. Murphy carded 35-37-72 on his own ball in the second round.

Burris Homer Wins for KHS

WAPPINGERS

Ertha Burris slammed a two-run homer in the top of the seventh inning to give the Kingston High girls softball team an 8-7 lead over Ketcham, then KHS catcher Mary Ellen Duffy saved the game with a key defensive play in the bottom half as the Maroons improved to 12-3 on the year with a victory over the Indians.

Duffy made a winner out of Barb Myers when she fielded a bunt pop in the bottom of the seventh and fired to first to double Ketcham's Diane Tamazoin and kill RCK's last threat. The Indians had taken the lead with four runs in the sixth off starter Linda Van Wagner.

Kingston took a quick lead, scoring six runs in the first inning as Jodi Simmons, Rose Provenzano and Diana Baker knocked in runs. The Maroons were held scoreless after that until Myers drew a walk off Alison Bodley in the seventh and Burris followed with her fourth hit of the game.

Myers improved her record to 7-3. Lori Eaton had a triple for Kingston.

Homosexual to Fight Air Force Discharge

HAMPTON, Va. (UPI) — T. Sgt. Leonard Matlovich has served 12 years in the Air Force including three tours in Vietnam. Now he faces expulsion from the service because he says he is a homosexual.

But Matlovich, 31, who won a medal for each of his tours, says he is confident the civilian courts will change the military's regulation.

"I think we're going to win," Matlovich said Tuesday. "I'm convinced of that because our cause is right and just."

All branches of the military have a long-standing policy of excluding homosexuals and discharging those who are either homosexual or have homosexual tendencies. A military hearing is scheduled for late June or early July to determine whether Matlovich is a homosexual.

"I'm sure I'll be discharged and we'll have to win the case in court, but I believe their rule is unconstitutional," he said. "They'll probably argue that homosexuality would be bad for the morale of the troops, but I'm convinced at least 10 percent of the military—and that's not just the Air Force—is gay."

Matlovich said the American Civil Liberties Union is working with him in preparing his case for a fight through military channels and, if necessary, through the federal court system. He says he is prepared to "climb any mountain" to win his case.

A Pentagon spokesman said the matter is not open to debate in the military. "If a guy says he's a homosexual, he's automatically out," he said.

Matlovich sent a letter to his supervising officer March 6 stating that he was a homosexual but that he wanted to stay in the Air Force because he considered himself "fully qualified for further military service. My almost 12 years of unblemished service supports this position."

Last week, he received a reply from Lt. Col. Charles P. Richie, his commander, notifying him that "I am initiating action against you with a view to effecting your discharge from the United States Air Force."

Bicentennial Plate

Showing off New Jersey's new bicentennial license plate is Linda Funari, an aide to Gov. Brendan Byrne. The plates will be available to motorists in early July for a small surcharge to the registration fee, and may be displayed in place of the normal front plate.

Assembly Turns Down Charge

ALBANY (UPI) — Breaking with legislative tradition, the assembly has voted to override Public Service Commission (PSC) approval for a telephone company to charge for information calls.

The measure was one of five bills passed in the assembly Tuesday. All are aimed directly at curbing the powers of the PSC, often attacked for being too soft on the utilities it oversees.

Assembly Speaker Stanley Steingut said he was "pleased and proud" of the Democratic package. He said people "have a right to expect the PSC to be a watchdog instead of rolling over and playing dead every time the utilities want a rate increase."

The future of four of the bills was uncertain in the Republican-controlled senate.

Under one of the bills, the New York Telephone Co. would be barred from charging residential customers for information calls. The PSC had approved the levy, which was to go into effect Sept. 1.

Sponsored by Assemblywoman Jean Amato, (D-White Lake), the bill would limit charges for information calls to businesses.

Other PSC-related measures approved would: exempt senior citizens from utility deposit requirements; force gas and electric companies to receive PSC permission before launching costly advertising campaigns; and prohibit subsidy payments for conversion to electricity.

The only bill already passed by the senate dealt with a requirement that the PSC conduct rate increase hearings in the areas served by the utility seeking the hike. Such a procedure generally has been PSC policy but was not specifically required by law.

In other action Tuesday:

• The Assembly unanimously approved a measure that would ease franchise agreements imposed by large oil companies on dealers. Sponsored by assemblyman Daniel B. Walsh, (D-Franklinville) the measure would require oil firms to show "good cause" before they could cancel, terminate or refuse to renew a franchise agreement.

"Historically, gasoline dealers have suffered inequities in franchise agreements with the major oil companies," Walsh said, adding that "the gasoline shortage pointed up these inequities."

• The Senate passed a bill that would require school bus evacuation drills for all students—including those who walk to school.

Happy Birthday

Ford's Initial Oil Tariff Still Not Working

WASHINGTON (UPI) — When President Ford first raised the tariff on imported oil last February, he hoped the resulting higher consumer prices would help cut the demand for foreign petroleum.

So far, it hasn't worked. After three months of higher prices for foreign oil, imports are running at about the same level as before.

Balance of trade figures released Tuesday by the Commerce Department put the value of imported petroleum and related materials in April at $2.44 billion. That's roughly the average monthly import level of the last half of 1974.

"In other words," said Commerce Secretary Rogers C.B. Morton after reviewing the trade report, "there has been no improvement in the basic problem of dependence on foreign sources of energy."

Actually, the oil trade has been highly volatile since the first of the year. In January, when American companies first caught wind of Ford's plan for three successive monthly increases of $1 per barrel in the import tariff, there was a rush to bring in as much petroleum as possible at the earlier cheaper tariff.

The value of imports jumped to $3.05 billion in January but then fell to $1.92 and $1.34 billion in February and March as food crises over the next quarter century," Kissinger said. He hailed a proposal by oil-producing nations to create a fund to finance food production in poorer, developing countries.

"President Ford has asked me to announce that the United States will participate in the creation of such a fund. We believe its resources should total at least $1 billion a year," he said.

U.S. diplomats said Kissinger's speech today and his Tuesday address to the 18-nation International Energy Agency formed an outline of America's current foreign economic policy.

Kissinger spoke before flying to Brussels to join Ford at a summit meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and a European tour to include a meeting with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat in Salzburg, Austria, as well as sessions with Spanish leaders in Madrid and Pope Paul VI and Italian officials in Rome.

His speech Tuesday outlined plans for the oil-consuming industrialized nations to spend $1 trillion on gaining independence from oil-producing nations. Today's address to the OECD dealt with how rich and poor free nations can band together to prosper.

Kissinger said a food crisis, a global recession and "inflation unprecedented in the postwar period" threaten all free nations and require joint action.

In Washington, Ford announced a new dollar-a-barrel oil import tariff Tuesday night in an attempt to spur Congress into enacting a national energy program and curbing U.S. fuel consumption.

In his IEA speech, Kissinger offered a major concession to bring the oil-exporting states back to the international energy talks that collapsed in Paris last March.

The talks broke down when the industrialized nations refused to consider demands for negotiating marketing arrangements for other raw materials in addition to petroleum.

Kissinger said the United States is now at least willing to hear arguments in favor of discussing the marketing of other products, such as coffee, sugar and wheat.

Diplomatic observers said the energy talks may be resumed within a month if the oil-exporting nations and the developing countries accept Kissinger's offer.

In a news conference Tuesday, Kissinger appealed to all nations — rich and poor, oil-importing and oil-exporting — to endorse global cooperation, not energy warfare.

"The United States is prepared to make a serious effort with goodwill and a cooperative attitude and we are calling on the developing and the producing nations to avoid confrontation," he said.

But the secretary said the first order of business for nations importing fuel must be conservation, development of new energy sources and achieving oil independence.

Initial reaction to Kissinger's program was favorable among America's allies, but it remained to be seen if the Arab states and other oil-exporting nations would accept the plan.

'Research and Development Program Needed'

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Gulf Oil Co. says the industrial West must embark on a comprehensive energy program to reduce dependence on imported oil by spending well over a trillion dollars on research and development.

A spokesman for the nation's fourth largest producer Tuesday said a program designed to achieve energy self-sufficiency should stress:

—Conservation of available fuel supplies without jeopardizing jobs.

—Development of offshore oil.

—Research on synthetic fuels, including gasification of coal.

—Nuclear and geothermal energy.

In Paris Tuesday, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger called on the world's principal oil-consuming nations Tuesday to cooperate and cut their dependence on oil imports. But a Gulf spokesman said even the expenditure of a thousand billion dollars, as Kissinger proposed, would not solve the problems.

"A trillion-dollar program might not be enough," the spokesman said.

"While Gulf agrees with Dr. Kissinger's primary goals and the importance he places on increased energy production by the consuming nations, we feel that he underestimates the financial requirements needed to develop and expand these energy sources."

Kissinger urged Western Europe and Japan to work together with the United States over a 10-year period to develop independent fuel supplies.

In order to achieve a significant reduction in foreign oil imports over the next decade, "dramatic" increases in the production of coal, nuclear energy, off-shore oil drillings and other energy sources would be required, Gulf said.

"It is critically important that the United States and other oil consuming nations reduce their dependence on imported oil," the spokesman said. "It should be noted, however, that while conservation is important, conservation alone cannot provide the solution to our energy needs. Indeed, Sheikh Yamani of Saudi Arabia and other representatives of producing nations have stated they have little incentive to deplete their oil resources while the U.S. conserves its energy resources."

"The real solution to the energy problems is for the U.S. to increase its energy production."

14 Former Top Executives Begin Jail Terms for Fraud

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Two years ago they were wealthy, pampered top executives of a multibillion-dollar financial conglomerate that was the marvel of Wall Street. Today they are, or soon will be, inmates in federal penitentiaries.

Fourteen former executives who pleaded guilty to directing the $2 billion Equity Funding swindle — believed to be the biggest corporate fraud in U.S. business history — have begun serving prison terms.

Stanley Goldblum — co-founder and president of the company and reputed mastermind of the massive and audacious fraud — was to report to the maximum security federal prison at McNeil Island, Wash., Tuesday to begin an eight-year term. The warden reported he checked in five days early last Thursday.

Former executive vice presidents Fred Levin and Samuel B. Lovell surrendered Tuesday at Terminal Island federal prison here to begin five-year sentences.

Nine other former executives are scheduled to report this week to Terminal Island or to the federal prison camp at Lompoc, Calif. Most were sentenced to two or three years. Two were allowed to serve shorter sentences under a "work-furlough" program, holding jobs during the day and reporting to the county jail to be locked up at night.

The imprisonment of the former Equity Funding executives on charges of fraud, conspiracy and securities laws violations does not come close to ending the complex case.

Although the warden at McNeil Island noted that Goldblum could be paroled at any time, he has also been sentenced to a 5-to-8-year term in New Jersey, where officials said they would reimprison him if he is paroled by federal officials. Levin has already pleaded guilty to charges in Illinois and was sentenced to 2-to-8 years, and Goldblum and others face possible trial there.

Civil suits demanding billions of dollars in damages are pending in federal and state courts involving some of the nation's richest corporations, federal and state governments and regulatory agencies, hundreds of prominent law firms and thousands of individuals. The attorney general of Illinois has called the main action in federal court here "the legal battle of the century." Lawyers expect it to take years.

Investigators have said the fraud was so massive, and the corporation's books were falsified so thoroughly and for so long, that it may be impossible ever to determine its true financial history.
